TERMS OF TURKS ARE REJECTED

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The envoys of the Balkan allies today rejected the final terms of the Turkish delegates and the peace negotiations were suspended.

Unless the powers act immediately and energetically, war will probably be resumed in the Balkans at once.

The negotiations collapsed, and the plenipotentiaries of the allies withdrew after the Ottoman delegates presented their final terms, which failed to meet the demands of the Bulgarians.

When the Turkish proposals were introduced the envoys of Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro and Greece withdrew from the art gallery in St. James Palace, where the sessions were held, to a private room, where they conferred among themselves for some time.

Allies' Envoys Withdraw.

Upon their return to the conference chamber the spokesman of the allies informed the Turks that the Turkish terms were unsatisfactory and could not be accepted.

Reshad Pasha, speaking for the Ottoman delegates, replied that they had been instructed by the Porte to make no further concessions.

The envoys of the allies then withdrew.

The rupture in the negotiations came unexpectedly, as it had been confidently expected that pressure from the powers would keep the negotiations in progress until Turkey met all the demands of the allies.

When the Turks tendered their latest proposals it was found that, while they made further cessions to the allies in Thrace and gave way on the status of Crete, they refused to give up Adrianople, which was the chief demand of Bulgaria.

The Turks were asked if further concessions might be expected from them, and the Ottoman delegates replied that their limit had been reached.

Conference Suspended.

"We must consider the work of this conference suspended," declared Dr. Daneff, speaking for his Balkan colleagues.

News that the negotiations had been broken off caused great excitement in official circles.

Telegrams from Paris, Berlin and Vienna stated that the downfall of the conference was causing grave apprehension on the continent on account of the possibility that a renewal of war might endanger the peace of Europe.

KING HAS PAID $25,000 BACK TO CREDITORS

From the bankrupt estate of Cardenio F. King, whose petition for a pardon from his long term of imprisonment is pending before Governor Foss, the trustee, Lee M. Friedman, has managed to turn $25,000 over to the creditors of the former financier in the form of dividends. A final distribution of 5 per cent., or $5,000 has just gone out to the creditors through the office of Mr. Friedman. There were two previous dividends of 10 per cent. each. After passing upon all claims presented against the estate of King, the trustee brought the total down to about $100,000. The dividends have been paid upon this amount of liabilities.

When Mr. Friedman took charge of the estate of King there was about $8 in money available, in addition to stock certificates of a questionable value, insurance policies and personal property at his Brookline residence. There was very little realized from the assets outside of the endowment insurance policies.

An adjustment was made with the various companies whereby substantial amounts accrued to the benefit of the creditors. There was always the possibility of the creditors receiving their claims in full, but the death of King would have to occur.

As trustee of the estate, Mr. Friedman assumed the responsibility of keeping up the payments of the premiums on the policies. In addition to the dividends paid out an additional amount was realized, so that the expenses of the bankruptcy case have been met.

Thousand Princeton Men Wilson Escort in Inaugural Parade

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 6.—One thousand Princeton students will probably act as an escort to President-elect Wilson in the inaugural parade at Washington. Paul F. Myers, president of the Woodrow Wilson Club of Princeton University, today told the President-elect that the students were extremely anxious to participate in the inaugural parade as a bodyguard to Mr. Wilson. Mr. Wilson said the plan appealed to him, but he would have to find out from Chairman Austin of the Inaugural Committee, if the arrangements could be made. The President-elect promised to write to Chairman Austin to learn if a place could be found for the Princeton escort in the procession.

Much interest was attached to a conference arranged for today between the President-elect and A. Mitchell Palmer, Democratic National Committeeman from Pennsylvania, who is spoken of as "the next Attorney-General of the United States."

Mr. Wilson reached the State House shortly after 9 o'clock and at once plunged into a mass of correspondence.

FIRST STEP TAKEN TO BREAK UP THE MORGAN INTERESTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The first step in dissolving the great Morgan chain of financial interests, which it has been alleged form the heart of the money monopoly, will be the complete reorganization of the Chase National Bank.

This banking institution controls sixty-seven corporations, representing $11,527,000,000 capital, according to the evidence presented the Pujo congressional committee, investigating the money trust.

The prediction of the fall of the so-called Morgan money monopoly comes on the eve of J. Pierpont Morgan's annual Winter vacation in Europe.

The George F. Baker interests, a branch of the House of Morgan, held the controlling stock of the Chase National Bank, which is to be transferred to a group represented by Albert H. Wiggin, president of the institution.

It is understood that Mr. Morgan and George F. Baker have relinquished their stock control in the Chase Bank, which the First National Bank held through the First Security Company.

Lindsay of counsel for the defence, asked for a postponement until Monday, which motion was granted.

EIGHT VESSELS WRECKED BY WIND STORM

Thrilling stories of shipwreck and narrow escapes from death in the recent hurricane that swept the country and raced over a great portion of the Atlantic, reached Boston today through over-due vessels that came in and others that touched other points for help.

Of fourteen steamers that were from a day to a week overdue in Boston today, only one has made her way to her wharf. She is the Aurore, seven days out from Cabrian, Cuba. She had a storm every day of her trip, and her black smokestack was white with encrusted salt from the spray thrown against it. It was feared that her cargo of sugar was saturated.

The Carisbrook, six days out from Huelva, Spain, was sighted off Cape Cod. Her pilot house is gone and it was apparent that other damage had been done.

The Jeserie, from China and Japan, due here December 29, and the Cliftonia, due here December 31, were compelled to run into Halifax for coal.

Hardly a boat caught in the storm escaped unscathed. In some cases the vessels were swept ashore. In other cases the captain and crew were compelled to take to all sail and take chances with the terrific wind and the enormous waves.

On the shore at Provincetown three small craft were caught in the waves and dashed upon the beach, as though they had been floating shoe boxes. At Gloucester the fishing schooner Monitor was driven on Ten Pound Island.

The Valerie, one of the biggest schooners sailing from T Wharf, was caught in the hurricane north of this port. She had a narrow escape, as the men told today when the boat limped into the Halifax harbor. The rigging of the ship was in shreds and the men were exhausted as a result of their fight for life.

The Mildred and Blanche, a small schooner, is a total wreck; the sloop Pearl and the schooner, Sam and Priscilla, partially wrecked, are ashore near Provincetown, the last two lying so that probably they can be saved.

WOMAN SWEARS FRESNO DAN IS REAL RUSSELL

Positive identification of "Fresno Dan" as the rightful Daniel Blake Russell was made today by Mrs. Ada Skinner, a witness called by the estate.

The witness had testified about knowing the Russell family in the late seventies and had described the appearance of Daniel Blake Russell as a boy. "He was a delicate little chap," said the witness. "He had such soft and delicate hands. In fact he looked as though he would be a victim of tuberculosis." At this point Ferdinand C. Almy entered the courtroom with "Fresno Dan."

Attorney Nason asked the witness if she knew who the small man was. "That man is Daniel Blake Russell," replied Mrs. Skinner. "Dakota Dan," who was sitting a few feet from the witness, laughed aloud.

Dakota Dan was asked to stand up.

Q.—Now, Mrs. Skinner, did you ever see this man before? A.—Yes.

Q.—Look at him very carefully and then say whether or not he is, in your opinion, Daniel Blake Russell.

Mrs. Skinner gazed long and earnestly at Dakota Dan.

"Certainly not," was her answer. "There is nothing about this man by which I could recall Daniel Blake Russell.

Mrs. Skinner said that her father during the late seventies held a 20-acre tract in Melrose and that she was a frequent visitor at the Russell home.

TRIANGULAR DEBATE PLANNED SATURDAY

The Princeton representatives have not yet been decided upon.

Foss Inquires into Boston's Coal Situation

Governor Foss today began a personal investigation of the coal situation in Boston.

This action was taken when the coal committee of the United Improvement Association reported that there was a plentiful supply of coal in this city. State police were immediately assigned to the investigation with instructions to determine who is responsible for the high price of coal, and also whether the various coal dealers in this city have a working agreement which is a violation of law. It was intimated that Governor Foss will ask Attorney-General Swift to take a hand in the investigation.

For several weeks the committee appointed by the United Improvement Association has been making an exhaustive investigation of the situation. Many of the coal dealers have maintained that there was a shortage of coal and that this was responsible for the high prices.

The committee in its report states emphatically that there is a plentiful supply.

Under a law passed in 1906 Governor Foss has the power to revoke the license of any dealer for extortion.

This power is also given to the courts. Under an act passed in 1911 the Supreme Court is given the power to appoint a master, whose duty it will be to make an investigation of any alleged trust or combination complained of.

If the State police find that a combination, or so called agreement exists between the coal barons there are several other statutes under which the State can proceed against the dealers.

COTTON CORNER ILLEGAL; PATTEN TO STAND TRIAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—James A. Patten, the millionaire Chicago grain operator, and four business associates, who were indicted for cornering the cotton crop of 1909, must stand trial on the charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law.

The Supreme Court of the United States today handed down a decision in this case known as "the cotton corner case," reversing the decision of the Circuit Court which had dismissed the government's charges against Patten.

In addition to Patten, the others who must stand trial are: C. W. Browne of New Orleans, Frank B. Hayne of New Orleans, Eugene Scales of New York and Texas, and Robert M. Thompson of New York. All are powers in the cotton market.

The defendants were indicted in June, 1910, the indictments charging them with conspiring with certain corporations that the manufacture of raw cotton in Alabama, Georgia, North and South Carolina to control the price of cotton.

Associate Justice Vandeventer, who read today's decision, pointed out that the defendants had contracted to buy amounts largely in excess of the available supply.

ORIENTAL TINGE IN THE PHILLIPS DANCE TONIGHT

Like a fragrant Chinese flower of delight will be the interior of Copley Hall tonight, when the second important social function of the season in Boston will take place there.

It is the dance of Mrs. John C. Phillips, at which will be introduced her daughter-in-law, Mrs. William Phillips, and Miss Martha Putnam, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pickering Putnam of Marlboro street.

Mrs. Phillips was Miss Eleanor Hyde, one of the finest singers of the Vincent Club. She is a sister of Arthur Hyde, the famous organist, now in New York, but formerly at the Emmanuel Church in Boston.

Niece of Colonel Astor.

Mrs. William Phillips, married two years ago, was Miss Caroline Astor Drayton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton of New York, and niece of the late Col. John Jacob Astor.

Tonight's entertainment is the latest in a season of original and costly entertainments by Boston society.

An oriental tinge is to be given to the decorations at the dance in honor of young Mr. Phillips, who has been for ten years in the diplomatic service of the government. Mr. Phillips is a graduate of Harvard and of the Harvard Law School. His first position was as secretary of Ambassador Joseph H. Choate in London. Later he was secretary of the American legation at Pekin and holding other positions until he became first secretary of the American embassy at London.

Married in England.

The ball room will represent a street in China. At the end of the street there will be a Chinese theatre, and along one side of the street will be Oriental shops with attendants dressed in Oriental costume.

This scene was designed by Joseph Lindsay Smith, the Mt. Vernon street artist, and will be the most elaborate and costly of any ball setting in Boston so far this year.

The marriage of Phillips to Miss Drayton took place in February, 1910, in the quaint old church in the village of Rogate, Sussex, England. Their honeymoon was spent at Fawkewood, near Seven Oaks, a country residence leased by Mr. Phillips.

This is the first Winter in Boston of Mrs. Phillips for three or four years and she has received an enthusiastic welcome. She spent the Summer at the country estate, Morning Farm, Mr. husband, Dr. John C. Phillips, is up the Nile making a collection of mammals of Eastern Soudan for the museum in Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, who arrived from London recently, are living in the Amory house in Commonwealth avenue. Young Mrs. Phillips was very popular in diplomatic circles abroad and Boston has given her a warm reception.

NEW LIGHT ON DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Important new evidence bearing on the mystery of the death of Mrs. Mildred Menard Donovan of Revere was unearthed by the Lynn police today. Last Monday—a week ago today, and more than twenty-four hours before she met her death—Mrs. Donovan pawned her watch, her bracelet and two plain gold rings in an Andrew street, Lynn, pawnshop, while a man, believed by the pawnbroker to have been "Kid Carter" Jennings, stood outside the door on the sidewalk.

In another Lynn pawnshop "Kid Carter" bought the revolver with which he shot William McPherson, in the South End, on New Year's Day, at about the hour when the body of the Malden mystery victim was found.

Model Gives Clew.

Other evidence of the greatest importance to the detectives working on the case was secured by an AMERICAN reporter to whom Mrs. Charlotte Tatham, an artists' model living in Claremont park, declared she is positive she saw Mrs. Donovan and William McPherson, "Kid Carter" visiting together at the Highland House in Roxbury, where McPherson was employed. Mrs. Tatham's story was corroborated by at least two attaches at the hotel.

Carter, whose real name is James Brandon Jennings, was brought into the Municipal Court on the charge of slaying McPherson. As the police were not ready to proceed with the case, a postponement was granted until next Monday. Carter was held without bail. In his cell at the Charles street jail, Carter was visited today by his mother, Mrs. Peter Jennings, and his sister, Miss Mary Jennings, a dramatic reader, of Everett.

Aids in Clearing Mystery.

The cause of the facts brought to light in Lynn was in partially clearing up some of the mystery surrounding the death of Mrs. Donovan. The absence of the watch, bracelet and two plain rings when the body was discovered Wednesday was taken as the basis for a theory that robbery was the motive in the baffling mystery. The dead woman pawned the articles of jewelry the day before she left her home in Revere for the last time about 6 o'clock New Year's Eve, accompanied by Carter. According to the pawnbroker, Mrs. Donovan came into his shop with a woman she declared was her mother. Outside a man waited, who closely answered Carter's description.

"The jewels belong to me," said Mrs. Donovan to the pawnbroker. "Now this watch is one I think a lot of. It's a family watch. Be careful of it."

The Lynn police declared that when Mrs. Donovan pawned the watch, she said:

"In the back of the watch is the picture of the man I love most dearly in the world."

The picture was declared to have been that of "Kid" Carter. Watch, bracelet and rings were still at the pawnshop today. It was expected that they would be turned over to the Lynn police. Whether or not the woman turned the money she received on the jewels over to Carter, the police said they had been unable to learn. They said they knew the alleged slayer of McPherson needed funds on which to make a trip to Providence where he was scheduled to take part in a boxing bout tomorrow.

Located Pawnshops.

Inspector William Kane of the Lynn police discovered the pawnshops in which Mrs. Donovan had pawned her jewels and Carter had bought his revolver. The weapon was purchased from I. Levine, on Central avenue, Lynn, on November 18. Levine's record showed it had been pawned on November 20, and had been taken out nine times in December. Carter gave the name of "John Sullivan" at the pawnshop.

The Andrew street pawnbroker, whose name is withheld at the request of the police, said he had seen Mrs. Donovan and the man with her when she pawned jewels on several previous occasions. He did not know whether they had come to his place before or not.

"I could not swear it was Carter who waited outside," said the pawnbroker. "But I should say it was from the picture and description of Carter. With Mrs. Donovan was an older woman. I began to ask her questions as is usual in such cases.

"'This is my mother,' Mrs. Donovan said to me. 'The jewels belong to me.' She asked me to be particularly careful of the watch as it was one she prized highly. She gave her name as 'Mildred Conard.' That was last Monday, December 30."

Two waitresses at the Highland House in Roxbury, claim to have seen McPherson and Mrs. Donovan together on several occasions.

They say also that he came in occasionally for food and drink with another "refined appearing young woman in black" who was slighter and shorter than the very tall and striking girl whom they at once recognized as Mrs. Donovan upon seeing her pictures in the newspapers following the discovery of her body in the rear of a Malden cemetery New Year's Day.

The manager of the Highland House, who requested that his name be not used, said:

Employes are Positive.

The young women in my employ who say they remember seeing the Donovan woman in here with McPherson appear to be quite positive. Furthermore, they told me about the matter separately, each not knowing that the other had reported the facts and the queer thing about it was that all their stories dove-tailed perfectly. I don't think there is any doubt that the Malden victim was in here with McPherson.

McPherson worked here several months Saturdays and Sundays. One day he remarked that his wife was a waitress and that if we ever became hard pressed we could get her. I had her in here two days and she appeared to be a very quiet and industrious young woman. I looked upon him as rather hasty and talkative, but he was a clean-cut young fellow, the kind you would look at twice.

McPherson left my employ three weeks ago. He lodged at No. 129 West Concord street. His wife's name was either Katherine or Mabel Clark, if I remember correctly. I never saw "Kid Carter" in here to my knowledge.

Frequented Same Cafes.

This testimony of employes of the Highland House is supplemented by evidence offered by associates of McPherson and "Kid Carter," the Everett pugilist, who is accused of McPherson's murder, to the effect that they and Mrs. Donovan were all acquainted.

Persons who frequent the South End say that "Kid Carter" is a member of the band known as the "forty thieves." Investigation today brought to light the fact that Carter and McPherson frequented the same cafes, gaming places and neighborhood, and that it would have been impossible for them to have avoided meeting under the circumstances.

Furthermore, Ida Feeny of No. 110 West Springfield street today declared that "Kid Carter" lodged at her house and that McPherson and a friend named McLoughlin often visited the house. They didn't call on Carter to her knowledge, but her story shows that they were thrown closely enough in contact to visit the same house.

All this is in direct contradiction of the detailed statement of McPherson that he never saw Carter or Mrs. Donovan and refutes Carter's declarations, under third degree pressure, that McPherson was a stranger whom he mistook for a detective and whose manner and appearance offended him in the South End barroom where the fatal shooting took place.

After forty-eight hours of investigation the State police are reported to be satisfied that Mrs. Donovan died a natural death as reported by Medical Examiner Thomas M. Durell and the Malden police take a similar view.

However, these questions remain unanswered, and to solve them the police are bending every effort:

Was Mrs. Donovan alone when she died?

How did Mrs. Donovan reach the lonely part of Malden where her body was found?

Who was the last person to see Mrs. Donovan alive?

Where did Mrs. Donovan go after she started for the home of "Kid" Carter's mother in Everett?

It has just come to light that shortly after the body of Mrs. Donovan was found in a clump of bushes off Lynn street, New Year's afternoon, a pair of new gloves were picked up in Holy Cross cemetery. The police have jealously guarded this find. They admit that indications are strong that the gloves belong to "Kid Carter," and that though them they may eventually be able to place him on the scene when Mrs. Donovan died, as they believe, from an attack of epilepsy. The police also make it clear that the gloves in question have nothing to do with the blood-stained pair found with a handkerchief, which discovery they brand as a "plant."

The police report that they are unable to place any one but "Kid Carter" in the company of Mrs. Donovan on the night she died. They have eliminated John Donovan, the girl's husband, from the investigation.

CARTER'S NAME A TERROR IN DIVES OF SOUTH END

In the haunts of the underworld in the South End the impression is general and deep-rooted that McPherson and "Kid Carter" were long acquainted through patronage of things in common.

There is no contradicting the fact that their associates were the same and that they patronized the same pool rooms, cafes and gaming dens, chiefly to shoot craps.

"Kid Carter" had gone lower than McPherson, who ranked more or less and whose record is not stained as is that of the Everett pugilist who now faces the charge of murder. "Kid Carter" has lived on the wits for several years. The prize ring was his undoing. His devoted mother says that.

In Cemetery Holdup.

As a pugilist he was what is known in ring parlance as a "ham fighter." This means that he was a filler in at preliminary bouts of little consequence. He came under the welterweight class. He was a better than average rough-and-tumble fighter, and was quick to take advantage of less powerful opponents. He had a fandango coming to him in the ranks of men who had distinguished themselves in glove contests, using at various times the name of a fighter now entering a long term in State Prison and the name of another boxer who had died leaving a far brighter mark on the scroll of pugilism than he ever could hope to gain.

"Kid Carter," according to the police, held up and brutally assaulted a man near the very spot where the body of Mrs. Donovan was found. He is also said to have worked at one time in the Holy Cross cemetery. He knows that entire section like a book, having spent his boyhood days there. He and his alleged accomplice in the cemetery holdup fled West when a warrant was issued. The other fellow was mangled by a freight train and his body sent home.

Visited Pool Room.

Intimates of "Kid Carter" agree that he was entitled to membership in a gang such as the "Forty Thieves," and they say further that he would not hesitate to hold up or assault anybody with money or valuables if occasion presented.

The lives of the South End he has been a conspicuous figure. That is why companions in the underworld now regard as significant that the first place he visited after coming from Malden, where he admits having left Mrs. Donovan New Year's eve, was a pool room in Chelsea which McPherson is known to have frequented.

It was learned today for the first time that he was seen on Columbus avenue by old comrades as late as 11:30 New Year's Eve before going to his aunt's in Dorchester. He was noticed loitering between Dartmouth street and the Plaza.

Next day, after changing his apparel and buying a new raincoat and cap in Dorchester, he went direct to the section of Roxbury where McPherson is known by the gang to have worked. He took a drink in a saloon across the street from Hunt's lunchroom where McPherson used to work as a waiter.

Called at Gymnasium.

Then he swung into Washington street and took a drink opposite the Highland House where McPherson worked also.

Next he turned up at Steve O'Donnell's gymnasium on the corner of Concord and Washington streets accompanied by another man. Both had been drinking, O'Donnell said. A few minutes later he shot McPherson in a saloon down stairs.

The police are working on the theory that his actions and movements indicated that he may have been searching for McPherson.

SAYS MRS. DONOVAN DRANK ONLY MILK WITH M'PHERSON

Mrs. Charlotte Tatham, who claims to have served William McPherson and Mrs. Mildred Donovan at the Highland House in Roxbury, thus establishing a friendship, which McPherson and "Kid Carter" denied, is twenty-nine years old. Part of the day she sits as a model in the studio of a well-known artist, and she works afternoons and evenings at the Roxbury hotel.

She is well educated and observing. She said:

I was acquainted with Billy McPherson. We called him 'Mac.' He worked here Saturday nights and Sundays, up to three weeks before his murder. He was a tall, well built young fellow and always dressed well. He was rather talkative and quick-tempered. I knew his wife, too. She worked here a few days on his recommendation.

I feel positive that he has been in here with the Revere young woman who was found dead near the Malden Cemetery. Just as soon as I saw Mrs. Donovan's pictures in the newspapers, especially the picture with the bangs, I recognized her as the girl who came in with Billy one evening last October.

I recall the incident as vividly as if it happened yesterday, owing to a laughable thing that occurred. It was about 5:30. I remember the night girl hadn't reported. She is due at 6 o'clock.

McPherson came in with the young woman and sat in a stall on the street floor. We girls noticed how tall his companion was. Billy was six feet or near it, and the girl seemed slightly taller than he was. The girl was well-formed and carried herself gracefully.

She wore dark clothing and a veil. She had rather a broad hat, as I remember it. What I noticed in particular was her peculiar way of wearing her hair. It was in bangs. I was also impressed with her skin. Her complexion was exceptionally clear, though her features could not be called pretty. However, she was a striking-looking girl, because of her general appearance and her height. She was the kind of a girl one would be apt to remember.

Billy stepped over to the bar, and returning asked his companion what she would have. She replied that she would have a glass of milk. That is the thing that I remember particularly. Besides, I remember the milk was in an unusually long and narrow glass, and we girls commented upon it.

What is more, in serving it I upset the glass and had to order another. These things make the incident very clear in my mind. I don't recall that the girl said anything. They did not remain more than five minutes. She seemed very reserved and anything but a drinking girl. The order for milk shown that, and when I read that her father said she never drank, I felt all the more certain.

I feel certain that it was Mrs. Donovan who was with McPherson that evening. Some of the other girls saw the same girl with him. To our question he came in with a somewhat shorter girl in black. I don't know 'Kid Carter' and don't think he was ever in here.

FREE AUTO AND BONUS VOTE IN BIG CONTEST

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

This is automobile week at the AMERICAN'S $40,000 Contest Headquarters at No. 5 Winthrop square.

Through arrangements made with the Republic Motor Company of the Motor Mart, Par. square, Boston, the beautiful four-cylinder "Little" automobile is now on display at the contest headquarters.

The Contest Editor invites all candidates to come in and look this car over. Examine its many varied features. Compare it with other automobiles you may know or have heard about and thoroughly satisfy yourself of the value of the special prize which the AMERICAN offers you.

Here is the New Year's Offer:

First—A special vote bonus will be given for each subscription turned in during the two weeks beginning Wednesday, January 1, and ending Wednesday, January 15, at 10 p. m., as follows:

Sub. term	Regular Bonus value	Bonus value	Total
3 months	1500 votes	750 votes	2250
12 months	3500 votes	1750 votes	5250
24 months	7500 votes	3750 votes	11250

Second—A four-cylinder "Little" runabout automobile will be given absolutely free to the candidate who polls the highest vote BY WEEKSCRIPTION between Wednesday, January 1, and Wednesday, January 15, at 10 p. m.

There is no red tape about this special offer. It simply comes down to a matter of subscriptions—the candidate polling the highest number of votes BY SUBSCRIPTION gets the car and in getting it he receives a product of experience than which there is none better in the automobile industry.

A full description of the four-cylinder "Little" runabout is given in an advertisement in today's AMERICAN.

Don't forget the special vote bonus given in connection with this automobile offer. With the aid of this bonus, candidates are able to fight it out for the automobile and at the same time improve their position in the final $40,000 prize list.

It is a case of HUSTLE—every minute from now until the end, and the end is not far off. The final day of the big contest comes on February 28—the final day of the New Year's offer comes on January 15 at 10 p. m.

But let's have the best that is in you, candidates. We urge this for your sake as well as for our own.

George J. Mullen of No. 108 Smith street, North Attleboro, is among the fighting candidates in District 8. In the last vote list he ranked second in his district.

Mr. Mullen is a member of the Milford Lodge No. 387, Loyal Order of Moose, and the Cosmopolitan Club of Milford. He is employed as night clerk at the Bay State Hotel of North Attleboro.

DIAMONDS in 1912 increased in value over 20%. The consensus of expert opinion today is that a similar increase will be recorded by 1914. Perfect stones are becoming more valuable on account of their scarcity, and imperfect ones also owing to the scarcity of the perfect ones. Then, too, we must go deeper and deeper into the mines for gems in the rough, all of which adds greatly to the expense of obtaining them.

Owing to the advance contracts of our foreign agencies, the World scale of prices has been and is today, continually below the market price. Those who have bought and buy now direct from us profit greatly thereby. This all means a saving to you of at least 1-3 on usual retail jewellers' prices.

Diamonds bought direct from Jason Weiler & Son, Boston salesroom, 365 Washington St., now will not only afford the wearer of the gems great pleasure but yield a good interest on the money invested. When rightly bought, a diamond can always be exchanged for its face value in cash.

Following is a partial list of diamonds just received from our Antwerp agency. The purchaser of any one of these rings will have the privilege of keeping it 10 days for comparison and appraisal, and if not entirely satisfactory, if desired, the full amount in cash. MRS. ARNOLD LAWSON WILL SELL KENNEL

Mrs. Arnold Lawson, daughter-in-law of Thomas W. Lawson, and one of the best known women dog fanciers in the country, is to sell her kennel, it became known today. Mrs. Lawson, who sailed for Europe last Saturday, is owner of some of the best known and most valuable dogs in the country. She will dispose of practically all of these, retaining only a few special favorites as pets. One of these will be her champion prize bulldog Noswal Nabob.

Noswal Kennels, owned by Mrs. Lawson, are located in Winchester. They have housed universal favorites and nowhere in America is there a finer string of popular little Frenchies. The dogs are worth thousands of dollars.

Keeps Champion "Nabob."

In picking the name for the kennels Mrs. Lawson spelled the family name backwards. She had the kennels built in the Summer of 1910. Soon she had purchased a number of dogs. She announced her intention of raising only French bulldogs. While in Paris she had bought Mirette de la Mer, a genius with a long pedigree. Mirette cost a small fortune.

Champion Noswal Nabob heads the list of celebrities. He is by Champion Nellcote Gamin and Brockenside Iota. The Nabob has defeated practically every dog of note in America during his sensational career. He was born on the eighteenth of September, 1910, and on the following year he made his debut at Newport, where he went from puppies to winners.

Shortly after that he appeared at the specialty show of the French Bulldog Club of New England, where he again was the winner. Nabob took his champion ship with a Get Rich Quick Wallingford rush for at his next two shows, Westminster and Chicago, he became a champion, winning his title at four shows, without a defeat. Less than a year from the time he made his appearance he won everything at the French Bulldog Club show, including stud class, where he appeared with his first-born.

Sensation of Dog Show.

Next comes Nosnal Nonad, a youngster, which will not celebrate his first birthday until May 1. Nonad was the sensation of the Specialty show in New England, and was shown with his litter brother, Nosnal Nimrod. Nosnal Nolsette is by Champion Nosnal Nabob and Dolly Wills. Then there is Nosnal Nolsette Nellcote Gamin and Sikdurs Princess, an eight-months-old infant prodigy. Nabette, by Champion Nosnal Nabob and Juliette Nanita, who is a litter sister of Nobob; Nina, by Gamethos and Mirette Celeste; Nanon, a litter sister to Nonad, and Nimrod, and a number of young puppies by Champion Nosnal Nabob.

With the exception of the wonderful Champion Mirette de la Mele, and Nosnal Coquette, practically the entire string will be sold.

MAY NOW PROSECUTE MURDOCK; HE DENIES EXCHANGE OF WIVES

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., Jan. 6.—District Attorney Greene, Assistant District Attorney Young and Coroner Moore met here today to discuss the advisability of commencing action under the criminal law against Gardner Murdock. This action is the result of the murder of Mrs. Henry C. Esley, wife of the retired millionaire banker and broker, by her husband, and his subsequent suicide, which followed an altercation and an alleged exchange of wives between Esley and Murdock as sworn to by Mrs. Murdock before the coroner Saturday.

Despite this attitude of the representatives of the law, Murdock declared that he would press his suit for alienation of his wife's affections and try to collect from Esley's estate.

"All Marriage Fees Belong to Ministers' Wives"—Mrs. Daniels

Mrs. C. H. Daniels of Boston in her address today before the Congregational ministers on "Minister's Wives," said that the marriage fees belong to them. Minister's wives should stand at the door of the churches and shake hands with strangers, and to get near to the young men, they should invite them to their houses on Sunday evenings and make them happy with a cup of tea.

In referring to the duties of a minister's wife, Mrs. Daniels said, she should have self culture at her finger ends. She should be diplomatic and use plenty of tact. To those, who are shut in, she should be a companion and helper. While her husband can do the preaching, she can be throwing oil upon troubled waters, and smoothing his pathway, as only the delicate touch of a woman can.

EX-POLICE HEAD DEAD.

Captain Harris B. Mitchell, seventy-six, former chief of the Malden police department, stricken with heart disease, died at the Revere House before the arrival of a physician.

G. O. P. SOLONS CONFER ABOUT SENATORSHIPS

Republican legislators in conference today to discuss party plans for the election of a United States Senator met with an ultimatum from Ambassador Curtis Guild.

While the Ambassador is in Russia and will remain there until after President Wilson is inaugurated, this was the nature of the ultimatum that friends of the former Governor made known to the Republican legislators today.

The Guild "Ultimatum."

That Curtis Guild is a candidate to the end for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Crane.

That if a two-thirds vote of Republican legislators favor the calling of a caucus, a caucus should be held.

That the Republican majority in both branches should assert itself and elect a young and Progressive Republican to the United States Senate.

That it should do this without soliciting the assistance of Democratic legislators.

That if a caucus should be held the Republican receiving two-thirds of the party vote should be supported by all the Republicans in the Legislature as the choice of the party.

"Log-Rolling" Charged.

Supporters of Congressmen Weeks and McCall, ex-Governor Draper and William R. Plunkett kept the State House corridors ringing with denunciations when they learned the nature of the Guild "ultimatum."

They pointed out that under its provisions 110 Republicans could secure the election of a United States Senator, when the Constitution provides that 280 legislators of the State—including both House and Senate—shall attend to that important matter.

"An attempt at log-rolling, pure and simple" was the way supporters of Congressman Weeks put it on Beacon Hill today.

JOKERS ADVERTISE YORK BEACH R. R. AS FARM FOR SALE

PORTSMOUTH, Jan. 6.—Citizens of York Harbor and York Beach were surprised today to read signs which had been posted on the property of York Harbor & Beach Railroad:

NOTICE

This property for sale, including tracks, poles, handcar, roundhouse and all the other old junk, as the road is closed. Good place for a hen farm. Taxes very low. Inquire Charles S. Mellen.

Railroad officials disclaim all knowledge of the signs. The York Harbor & Beach Railroad, a board-gage line of the Boston & Maine, is about eleven miles long, connecting York Beach and Kittery. The road was closed on December 28 until March 10. Commuters protested, but President Mellen said the matter rested with the directors of "the road."

The notice of "sale" may mean nothing. But the people of York and Kittery have instructed their representatives to take the matter up with the Maine Legislature. They propose an amendment to the charter to compel the Boston & Maine to furnish service to commuters at all times regardless of seasons and weather.

WANT PASTOR MORE OF A SOCIETY MAN

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 6.—The Rev. Norman J. Squires, for thirty-two years pastor of the First Congregational Church in West Haven, has been asked to resign, on the ground, it is said, that he is not prominent enough socially.

MAYOR DEFENDS CITY FETE ON NEW YEAR EVE

Mayor Fitzgerald today defended the municipal celebration of New Year's on Boston Common against the criticism of the Rev. Fr. Lyons, pastor of the Night Workers' Chapel.

Fr. Lyons maintains that the celebration was pagandike and that the festivities at the hotels and on the street that welcomed the advent of the new year were unchristian and deplorable. In his reply the Mayor says:

I think Father Lyons bases his conclusions on garbled newspaper stories of the celebration of New Year's Eve in a few private establishments. As far as the public celebration on the Common is concerned, for which I am responsible, it was a marvel of good order as well as good cheer. One hundred thousand people assembled there, and within five minutes after the conclusion of the celebration there was not a human being about the handstand.

New Year's Day is, I believe, a public holiday in every State except Massachusetts and Kansas. It is a time set apart by custom as well as law for people to get together in a spirit of good will and better understanding and it is my belief that many of the ills of the world come from a lack of appreciation of each other's point of view, due to the fact that people do not get together at appropriate intervals.

Of course there are some who abuse such occasions, but I think Boston's celebration was conducted with the minimum of disorder and abuse of the spirit of the day.

SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR J. R. KEENE

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—A simple funeral service was conducted for James R. Keene in Grace Church at 10 a. m. today. The service was led by the Rev. Charles L. Slattery. The family was represented by Foxhall Keene and Mrs. Talbot J. Taylor, son and daughter of the deceased, and Mrs. Taylor's two eldest children. Mrs. Keene was not present. She is several years old and in a weak condition, and has not left her Cedarhurst, L. I., home in several years. The honorary pallbearers included J. Pierpont Morgan, H. K. Knapp, F. K. Sturgis, Andrew Miller, Solomon Hanford, Marshall Peterson Kennedy and Dr. St. Clair Smith.

Keene's death followed that of his valet and faithful servitor of many years," and Keene's death was followed by that of his brother-in-law, Major Alexander Daingerfield, at Lexington, Kentucky.

Colonel Daingerfield was seventy-three. He was one of the most noted horse breeders in this State. He and Mr. Keene gave up much of their time in collaboration in the breeding and raising of thoroughbreds.

The news of Mr. Keene's death reached the aged Kentucky horseman on his death bed.

RICHESON'S BROTHER TO BE A MINISTER

BLACKSTONE, Va., Jan. 6.—Earl Richeson, brother of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, who was electrocuted on Boston last Spring for the murder of Miss Avis Linnell, has entered the Blackstone Academy, a preparatory school, to fit himself for the Baptist ministry.

He arrived here a day or two ago from his home in Amherst and entered upon his studies with vim.

It was through the influence of E. S. Ligon, principal of the academy, that young Richeson determined to follow his ill-fated brother into the ministry.

SIMEON FORD GOES UNDER THE KNIFE

STOMACH MISERY JUST VANISHES

Time It! No Indigestion, Gas or Sourness Five Minutes After Taking "Pape's Diapepsin."

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only fifty cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases, then you will understand why dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for indigestion or gastritis or any other stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion.

GLADYS GANZEL, WHO IS TO MARRY EDWARD A. POLAND

Miss Gladys Ganzel of Quincy, daughter of "Charlie" Ganzel, formerly catcher on the Boston Nationals, tonight is to sign up for life with Edward A. Poland of Norfolk Downs. The couple will be married at the bride's home. The wedding will crown a romance that started at an entertainment in Quincy a year ago.

Miss Ganzel is widely known along the South Shore. She swims expertly, is a devotee of all outdoor sports and delights in watching baseball games.

Edward A. Poland was one of the best athletes in attendance at the Quincy High School during his course there. He made several records in track events. He is a traveling salesman for a Boston wholesale grocery house.

Offends Navy Yard Captain, But Gets Time for Wedding

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 6.—Corporal Bert Swearington, who is attached to the United States Marine Corps at the navy yard here, became so enthusiastic over getting married today that he committed a serious breach of military etiquette which nearly caused a postponement of the ceremony.

Corporal Swearington and Miss Louise Bowker decided to get married today. But Swearington's time was up; he was due back at the navy yard. An extension of time was necessary. So Swearington called Captain Hill, U. S. M. C., on the 'phone and this conversation ensued:

"Hello, is this Captain Hill?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is Mr. Swearington. I want an extension of one hour on my leave. I want to get married."

Report to the yard at once."

The corporal's manner of addressing the captain was a breach of discipline. Swearington hurried into the wedding gown in navy yard restriction, with extra duty. But he managed to get a suspension of sentence, and hurried back to the city and was married.

BRIDE-TO-BE PROSTRATED AS PRESENTS BURN

Because of a fire which destroyed all her wedding gifts together with the home of her parents, No. 129 Kilton street, Dorchester, Miss Louise Parker is prostrated at the house of William Krafer, where the girl and her parents and brothers and sisters fled when the flames broke out.

The bride-to-be, who is twenty-four years old, announced her engagement to Chester Marshall of Jamaica Plain last Fall, and in anticipation of the wedding, which was soon to take place, she had been the recipient of many costly gifts from her friends. These wedding presents were kept in a room on the second floor. When the fire broke out near the room there was no time to save anything.

Mr. Parker, a musician as well as a letter carrier, lost his valuable drums. The damage to the house was estimated at $2,500. Defective furnace pipes are thought to have caused the fire.

Mr. Parker was down stairs getting breakfast when the blaze started. His wife and his son William, twenty-two, and daughters Louise and Phoebe, twenty, were asleep upstairs. They were awakened by the smoke and had barely time to put on bathrobes and slippers and flee.

The Parker house was owned by Flood & Tucker, real estate agents.

MIDAIR DEATH PLOT SHOCKS ALL ENGLAND

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Aero Club is investigating what the Daily Express says is probably the first attempt at murder in midair.

Lawrence Santoni, managing director of the British Dependents Aeroplane Company, has put before the club allegations that on three separate occasions attempts have been made or to damage the engines of certain military aeroplanes that they would break down while in flight.

The outrages, he says, were obviously the work of experts. Who they were, how they obtained access to the machines, and what their motives were, whether animosity against particular pilots or possibly passengers, the jealousy of particular aeroplane makers or possible design against the British sway of the air, are questions which will be investigated out by the Royal Aero Club and possibly by the police.

ENGAGEMENT OF MISS LELAH LUTHER

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Marion Luther of Cimarron, Kan., announce the engagement of their daughter, Lelah, to George Gershon Shor, Brown '08. Miss Luther is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and an instructor at Miss Windsor's school in the Back Bay. Mr. Shor is news editor of the AMERICAN.

HALLS OFFERED FOR DEBATE OF SCHOOL RIVALS

The prospects of a public debate between Miss Frances G. Curtis and Isaac Harris, rival candidates for the School Board, looked good today. The matter had preceded to this:

Miss Harris said she would be delighted to discuss school matters with Mr. Harris, but she hardly thought it worth while to go to the expense of hiring a hall. When Mr. Harris heard this he said he, too, would be delighted and he would hire the hall. Then came forward two others and offered to furnish a hall.

This came about because of the report that Miss Curtis avoided a debate with Mr. Harris last night at Food Hall. Both Mr. Harris and Miss Curtis said today that this was an error. No debate was scheduled and while Miss Curtis was there when Mr. Harris made a speech she left before he finished because she had another engagement at Wells Memorial Hall.

Miss Curtis had this to say today.

I should be delighted to debate public school questions with Mr. Harris if the opportunity were presented. But it hardly seems essential at this time to go to the expense of hiring a hall for such a debate.

Mr. Harris came back with this rejoinder:

I should be delighted to discuss public school questions with Miss Curtis, not merely for the sake of debate, but to give the voters a chance to see and hear the two candidates and get their views on questions that interest the whole city.

I wish such a debate could be arranged, not in the spirit of animosity, but in the spirit of fair play. I would be willing to pay the expense for the hall and treat Miss Curtis on an equitable bally should be treated.

When this news was circulated in political circles today Joseph P. Brady of the Ward 24 Democratic Committee and Chairman McManus of the Ward 22 Democratic Committee each offered to furnish a hall for the discussion.

HANDSHAKE BARRED, BOW SUBSTITUTE

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 6.—The Imperial City probably the most fashionable organization in the city, has put a ban on handshaking, and henceforth only the most formal bow will be proper at its functions.

COMPERS WARNS OF 'GOVERNMENT BY DYNAMITE'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Government by dynamite, if it ever becomes a reality, will be the direct result of government by injunction, according to President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, who today appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee to defend the Clayton anti-injunction bill, and incidentally to comment on the decision whereby thirty-three structural iron workers were convicted of shipping dynamite for unlawful purposes.

He assailed the partisanship of the judge in Indianapolis who convicted the dynamiters, and argued that even if they were guilty they had justification in the long oppression which they had suffered at the hands of manufacturers.

He said:

In commenting upon the bill before your committee I would call attention to the case, concluded in its first stage at least, in which men of a great labor organization were found guilty of shipping dynamite through the States. I find it necessary to meet the charges made and the insinuations which have been hurled at organized labor since this case began.

It is easy to explain, condemn and pity, but it is hard to understand. I wish this committee to consider those men, pilloried by public opinion and the judge, guilty of a great crime against society.

For six years all of the forces of organized society have been used against these men, through organized business interests brought together to destroy the organization of labor. You say these men use elementary and brutal methods? Their employers' employers less brutal in their methods toward their employees?

The judge who sentenced these men famously declared that government by injunction is better than government by dynamite. The worthy judge in his blindness refused to see the truth. These monster business corporations, engaged in death-grinding tactics, have forced the union men to use some method of defense.

Gompers attacked Detective William J. Burns and challenged him to produce any evidence to support his assertion that he talks in the dynamite conspiracy to the American Federation of Labor.

WHAT'S THE HURRY?

Well, Read the Interesting Whys and Hows of the Telephone Directory

If You Want to Get In, You Had Better Call Up FORT HILL 7600 To-day

It is to the mutual advantage of the Telephone Company and the subscriber to have the latter listed in the directory as soon as possible after he gets his telephone, because such a listing saves many calls for "Information."

The Boston division directory plays such an important part in promoting good service that its preparation, printing and distribution are subjects of the most careful supervision. It costs a good deal in time and money to revise an average of 40,000 listings per issue, to transform 600 tons of paper into 200,000 books of 400 pages each, and to distribute these books over 1,500 square miles, but it is well worth the effort.

It is apparent that the preparation for printing must proceed on a schedule as arbitrary as that of a newspaper pressroom. If the book is not produced promptly, much of its value is lost. When the closing date is announced, therefore, the printing must proceed with whatever listings are at hand. Those received subsequently must be held over for a later issue.

The patron who rushes in at the last minute with his order may find he cannot be listed in the next book. It may be for one of many reasons, such as the running of additional wires or the setting of new poles or cross-arms; but the reason is a compelling one, although perhaps it might have been overcome had sufficient notice been given.

MORAL: Don't wait another day if you are contemplating installing a telephone, or changing to another class of service. Call Fort Hill 7600 and ask for the Contract Department. Such a call, from any Telephone or Pay Station in the Metropolitan District is FREE OF CHARGE.

OPEN TARIFF HEARINGS AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The House Ways and Means Committee today began public hearings on tariff revision. Schedule A, chemicals, oils and paints, which raises at present about $12,000,000 per annum of revenue, is scheduled for "upward revision."

Under the Underwood revision of a year ago, the schedule was so revised as to bring in about $3,000,000 a year more. It did not pass the Senate nor did it become law.

Henry Howard of Boston, head of the Merrimac Chemical Company, appeared in behalf of the Manufacturing Chemists' Association of the United States. He declared there could be no fair revision of the chemical schedule unless it were based on scientific inquiry. He also asserted that the Underwood bill, which passed the House last Spring, increased the duties on raw materials and decreased the duties on finished products to such an extent that if it were enacted into law, the manufacturing chemical industry would be in danger of destruction.

S. A. McCormick of Baltimore, a manufacturer of spices, said that rates on those products should be increased to an ad valorem of 20 per cent. He said the present rate was too low.

Representative Greene of Massachusetts urged better protection for the sperm oil industry, saying that sperm oil should be classified separately from lubricating oils.

Louis S. Brigham of Randolph, Vermont, of the Brigham Sheet Gelatin Company, said the present classification of gelatin was unsatisfactory, and he thought that the finished product should pay a duty of about 35 per cent. He said that he lost his factory last month.

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS EXPRESS COMPANY RATES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The liability of the express companies for loss of packages at full value upon which the sender places a lower value to obtain a lower rate, was limited by the Supreme Court of the United States today in the case of the Adams Express Company against E. H. Croninger. The court held that the Cornack amendment to the interstate commerce law indicated that Congress did not intend to make the carrier responsible for absolute loss, but only such loss as may be due to its own negligence.

The carrier, it was held, had the right to protect itself against fraud by reasonable rules and regulations, and the fixing of a rate, according to the value of the article, was declared reasonable.

NEW GRAND JURY SWORN IN TODAY

The new Suffolk County Grand Jury was sworn in today in the Superior Court. It is expected one of the first cases in which evidence will be presented will be that of James Jennings ("Kid Carter"), accused of slaying William McPherson in a South End saloon, and also mentioned in connection with the mystery of the death of Mrs. Mildred Dodge.

Walter H. Wilkins of Ward 21 is foreman of the jury. Nathaniel B. Dodge of Ward 20 was chosen clerk. It is expected that evidence may be presented against the "de luxe" book selection ring against George H. Roundy, former bookkeeper at the Parker House, who is charged with stealing $31,000.

LONDON EXPERT VERY CONFIDENT OVER TONA VITA

John Beazley Webb, of University and St. Mary's Hospitals, London, England, is assisting in presenting a Tona Vita campaign in Boston.

"I have been a close student of nerves for some time," stated Mr. Webb. "And I have particularly specialized in Nervous Debility. But I would never have believed that this condition could be as prevalent as it is in the large cities of America.

"The boasted American push and success is being bought at a tremendous expenditure, because it would not be exaggerating to say that ninety per cent. of the city dwellers of the Eastern States of America are afflicted with nervous debility.

"In fact, so prevalent has it become that in Greater New York nervous debility as the national ailment and Tona Vita as the national tonic are accepted facts.

"Tona Vita has been bringing new vigor and vitality to many thousands of people who have just expressed their symptoms as being 'run-down.' It has saved hundreds of people torn by nervous debility from the operating table; because one of the commonest symptoms of nervous debility is the fact that the patients believe that they are suffering from all kinds of organic ailments.

"A fresh consignment of Tona Vita has been delivered for general distribution in the drug stores of Boston, and there will be many Bostonians who by the time the springtime of the year comes around again will feel that they have regained the springtime of life through the great national tonic, Tona Vita."

MOTT BRAVES POVERTY WITH MRS. BOWNE

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Hector Fuller, erstwhile war correspondent, who went to Hong Kong in an effort to bring back J. Lawrence Mott, 20, son of a wealthy iron manufacturer, who eloped last May with Mrs. Frances Hewer Bowne, an actress, is back in New York, and today he reported to the Mott family the failure of his errand.

Young Mott, who has been separated from his wife in Braintree, Mass., for several years, is still in Hong Kong with Mrs. Bowne. He steadfastly declined to listen to the urgent pleadings made by Fuller.

"The boy is deeply in love with Mrs. Bowne," said Fuller today at his hotel.

"All my efforts to induce him to give her up failed."

Fuller told the AMERICAN that Mott is doing what he can to maintain the little home he and Mrs. Bowne have at No. 9 Peddari hill, Hong Kong. With a gift for writing, Mott has turned this to use, while Mrs. Bowne aids by singing at the theatre or in churches on Sunday.

Living in Two Rooms.

The slopers have two rooms in their Hong Kong home and have done away with every luxury. Mott's father has cut him off without a cent, but this has not disheartened him.

"I don't care if I don't get anything from my father," Mott told Fuller the day the latter left for home, six weeks ago. "When I started from home I determined I would make my own way in the world. I am doing it."

The report of Mott began last May, the day after the couple slipped away on a freight steamer—the Indradeo—bound for Hong Kong. Mott had given his promise to Fuller to go on a long cruising expedition and caused a flurry when he went away, instead, with Mrs. Bowne.

While Mott and Mrs. Bowne are in Hong Kong, resolutely refusing to part, Mott's wife, with their daughter, now lives in a luxurious home at Riverside on the Hudson. Mrs. Mott has not decided whether she will ask for a divorce. Mrs. Bowne's husband maintains their home at Millerdale, N. Y. He consulted an attorney some time ago as to the advisability of a divorce.

In telling of his quest after Mott, last night, Fuller spoke of love letters written by Mrs. Bowne while she was traveling with a theatrical company in the West, last Spring. This was at the time that Mott's father was trying to dissolve the love attachment.

One of Actress' Letters.

Here is one written by the actress in South Bend, Ind.:

My Darling One:

Just received your letter, addressed here, also your wire. No letters received for two days, say you? I can't understand, for I have written regularly except, no, I did not write Friday from Chicago and again Saturday from there. I missed yesterday because I came over here and got busy.

I went to see the "Pink Lady" Saturday night and find my small, very saucy and very blonde cousin (undercoored), many times removed, making much more than good in the ingenue role. She is a perfect duck of a girl and for the good of the world of men, her mother's traveling with her.

I hadn't been in my room here half an hour yesterday when the inclosed card was sent up with a note, which last was utterly drawn and quartered and is now peacefully reposing in my waste basket. I did not dine with the writer of the note, nor did I see him, because you asked me not to.

This is the card which gave me such a shock at Springfield, Ill., and being only a very casual acquaintance, I didn't mind not having a big, fine dinner at some one else's expense.

Honey boy, the days do drag along, and at the very worst eight weeks is all we can expect this d-d-d- old season to stretch out. But if I get within half a night's ride of New York and you don't come to see me, you can—well, I'll be mad.

Now I must commence a long session with pesky hooks and eyes, buttons, torn bits of lace, and Lord only knows what teasing, tormenting, tantalizing, tiny bits of moulding.

Au revoir, my own. More tomorrow and every day thereafter. Love and billions of kisses.

Mother's Plea Is Vain.

In Hong Kong, Fuller tried uselessly for weeks to try to get Mott to return home. He then described the following incident:

Finally a letter came from Mrs. Mott, enclosing one to her son, in which she pathetically implored him to come home. At first he wouldn't read it, but passed it over to Mrs. Bowne, asking her what to do. "We don't want to hear from her," she said.

Eventually she remarked that "he might as well read it anyhow, as it wouldn't do any harm."

The letter was enough to make any one with a heart weep, but when Mott read it he flung it away. He reiterated his purpose to stick to Mrs. Bowne, and assured me he loved her.

OPEN HEARING IN THE STONE $10,000 ALIENATION SUIT

Thetrial of the $10,000 alienation suit of Mrs. Anna C. Stone of Cambridge, against Mrs. Gertrude I. Kilby of Boston, began in the Suffolk Superior Court today before Judge Fox and jury. Mrs. Stone accused Mrs. Kilby, who lives at No. 120 Appleton street, Boston, of taking the love of her husband, John A. Stone, a Boston business man, away from her. The wife further charged that she had been disgraced, humiliated and injured.

Mrs. Stone lives at No. 343 Broadway, Cambridge. Her husband has a place of business at No. 2 Ivanhoe street, Boston.

LILLIAN RUSSELL, WHO TELLS HOW SHE KEPT YOUNG

'I'm Still an Infant,' Says Lillian Russell on Secret of Youth

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 6.—For years and years the perennial youthfulness, the beauty, and what the French call the esprit of Lillian Russell have been the envy and wonder of all American women. How does she do it? What modern version of Dr. Leon's famed fountain does she employ? How, when legions of other women wage hopeless conflict with old Fop Time, does this amazing woman upset all rules of Dame Nature and stand forth a perpetual concord of loveliness and grace? And how we have the great secret! It is compacted in the line:

"A person is just as young as his spirit."

In an interview Miss Russell insists that her secret is no secret, but a principle, rather. It is contained in the Biblical truth, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Miss Russell doesn't specify the definite age limit at which she has stuck, but she insists, "A person is just as old as his or her heart is, and I intend to be always young."

"I don't think a person has a right to grow old," says Miss Russell. "One owes it to himself and those about him to stay young. Anybody can do it; it rests with one's self. They may grow old in the sense of years, but they shouldn't age.

"In other words, continue to live the life of one of twenty. THINK young thoughts, don't allow yourself to bend under the load of work and worry and run and rush, and you'll be always twenty, regardless of the onrush of years. I'm still an infant!

SAYS CAPE COD TRAIN SERVICE GOES BACKWARD

Railroad service between Boston and Cape Cod points has "progressed backward" in the past sixty years, according to Fred W. Dickinson of the Chamber of Commerce building, in a letter to the AMERICAN. He writes:

Editor, AMERICAN:

I think the facts below will show that the Old Colony Railroad "has progressed backward since it has been under New Haven management" and that the passenger train service between Boston and points on Cape Cod, although showing some slight improvement in the printed time tables, really is no better than it was sixty years ago.

I recently came into possession of a time table issued in 1853, and it gave the running time for the trains between Boston and Hyannis as three hours and thirty-three minutes. The trains were hauled by old-fashioned wood-burning locomotives and made fourteen stops between Boston and Middleboro. The running time in 1913, on paper, averages two hours and forty-eight minutes, with only two stops between Boston and Middleboro. Allowing thirty minutes for the twelve extra stops the old trains made, this shows a gain of some fifteen minutes in sixty years but, as the trains are so frequently late, the gain is more apparent than real.

On the forty-five and one-hill mile run between Middleboro and Hyannis the number of stops made by the trains of 1853 is about the same as the trains of 1913 make. The running time sixty years ago was two hours and is given in the time table issued by the New Haven Road as from one hour and forty-one minutes to one hour and fifty-one minutes—a time table gain of from nine to nineteen minutes.

This record of railway backwardness would be hard to equal anywhere in the United States.

FEAR FOR SUPPLY SHIP PANTHER, WITH 120 MEN ON BOARD

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Every vessel along the Middle Atlantic coast was notified by wireless today to search for the United States naval supply ship Panther, carrying a crew of 120 officers and men, which has not been heard from since she was caught by the full force of Friday's hurricane off Cape May.

For three days the shore stations from New Jersey to the Carolinas have been trying to get in touch with the Panther by wireless, but no answer was received to any of the queries.

At the height of the gale the Panther's wireless ceased working, but whether the wireless masts were crippled or whether disaster overtook the ship has not been learned.

BROKER KILLED IN FALL DOWN STAIRS

Mr. Hirsch was senior member of the cotton brokerage firm of Joseph Hirsch & Sons at No. 132 West Twenty-first street. He was on his way to the office when the accident occurred.

Suffragettes in Kidnap Plot Against British Cabinet

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Milder atrocities failing to win the ballot, the militant suffragettes now threaten stronger measures to gain their ends. Despite desperate precautions to insure secrecy, it became known today that Scotland Yard received reliable information that women of the suffrage movement had formed a plot to kidnap some member of the cabinet.

The police would give no intimation as to what particular cabinet officer the women had designs upon, but it was learned that a party of suffragists last Friday invaded the office of Home Secretary McKenna.

Disbelieving the statements of attaches that McKenna was at the House of Commons, the women broke into his private office, tore open closets and ransacked bookcases until police reserves, called from a nearby police station, forcibly ejected the women. Some of them were thrown bodily into the street.

Every member of the cabinet is now under guard.

HERE'S HOW TO GET A $9 HOTEL MEAL FOR $3

One little family in Boston chuckles today over the clever way they circumvented the design of the Copley-Plaza Hotel to charge guests dining there from the standpoint of the number rather than for the amount of food served to them.

For instance, it has been noticed that on the "per person" plan, if two people desire one order of fish, or meat or vegetable, it will be served for two and charged double. There is no such thing as splitting an order and serving it for two.

A man, his wife and their son, each of whom showed familiarity with the hotel, walked into the dining room. They each took up a bill of fare with a twinkle in their eyes. The father ordered roast beef. The mother ordered roast chicken. The son ordered three vegetables. Each was served to the one who ordered it and then the little party proceeded to make a family affair out of the meal.

Three separate amounts for what each had ordered were charged, instead of the usual custom of charging for three full orders of everything eaten. In that way the bill amounted to $3 when it otherwise would have been just three times that amount—$9.

My Husband Is Still Sober
We Are Doing Well Now. Two Bottles of Renova Cured Him

So writes Mrs. Bowman, of Watertown; her experience is like that of hundreds of others and you can make it your experience if you have a dear one who is a victim of intemperance. Read her letter: "Would you please send me some more of your circulars on Renova, as I have distributed all I had. My husband is still sober, two bottles cured him. We are doing well now. He travels nearly all the time and lives in the hotels and don't touch a drop." The woman who means business can have a sober husband. Just go to Riker-Jaynes' and get a package of Renova and put a little of it into his tea or coffee. Absolutely tasteless and harmless and given without his knowledge.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a whole nearby, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 204 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proof of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

Getting the Right Idea

By WINIFRED BLACK

I HAD a bad time the other day. I wanted something in the second drawer of my typewriter's desk. Push, pull, shake, rattle—no, it would not budge.

Let's try the key, maybe that will do it. No. It won't go in the lock at all. Maybe what I want is in the other drawer, anyhow. No, not there! Perhaps I can do without it, after all. No use. I simply cannot remember that woman's name.

Push, pull, tug, rattle, shake—I'll have to stop everything, I suppose, and send for a locksmith and have him bothering around an hour or so.

There, that was a good thump for you, you stubborn thing; but ouch! it hurt my knuckle. Where's the cold cream? Who'd think a simple skinning could smart so!

What's that? You have to open the top drawer before the next one will open. Is that all? Well, of all things, shut, open, shut, open—so simple, isn't it, when you get started right? Thank you so much, so stupid of me. Shut, open, shut, open—it works like a charm. I've got the right idea, that's all. That's it: the right idea. I'm going to try that somewhere else.

The friend of mine who has been acting so "queer" of late—so kind of offish and strange. Maybe I've been acting "queer" myself. I'll see.

I met that friend the very next day, and I did see. I forgot all about the "queer," and acted just as I did before I thought there was something odd about her attitude, and the frozen look went out of her eyes, and when she left me we had promised to meet soon for a long visit—like old times. I had forgotten the combination, that was all, and I thought it was all her fault.

The faulty woman who is doing that piece of work for me, and bungles it so badly—what in the world is the matter with her? She used to do so well. What, I was irritable the other day, and she grew discouraged and nervous? Well, maybe I was. I'll try the other way this time and see what that will do.

I heard a man scolding a trusted employe, and the man was saying, "You are not getting results—what's the matter?" And the trusted employe was trying to tell what the matter was, but he didn't.

The matter was he had worked faithfully and competently a long, long time. He had pulled the man's business up out of the mire—had put his very life blood into it—and in all the years not a word from the chief. And now, at the first halt in the march of triumphant results, there was only criticism and fault-finding.

Some men there are who cannot stand success. Tell them they have done a thing well, and they want to take a day off right then and there, so as to tell the neighbors what big fellows they are with the "boss." Never mind them—they'll be going soon, any way. You can't save a fool from his folly. Praise, appreciation, recognition—that's more than half the battle to any one worth his salt.

Slam—rattle! What's the matter down in the kitchen? The grocer's boy bangs the door, the cook says? No wonder, with such a face of fury to greet him. What's the trouble, cook? People late to luncheon, and this your day out? To be sure; to be sure; and they could have been here on time just as well as not, only they didn't think.

That's the whole trouble. We don't think. Good for you, little stubborn desk! You've taught me a lesson—one I needed. I'm going to get the right idea about some of these affairs of mine that get so tangled sometimes. I'll open the top drawer first. There, now, how simple it is. Shut, open; shut, open—easy as falling off a log, as my mother used to say.

She came from the logging country, where the men who worked in the rolling water at high mark knew just exactly how easy falling off a log really is—just as easy.

I suppose there must have been an easy way to stay on the log, too, if you only studied it out. Many did stay on them, and ride them triumphantly at that, down the rushing rivers to the very sea.

How does the old lumber camp song go, "Roll out, roll on, roll down?" There, now, I'm going to learn the secret if I can, and stay on my log—by learning how to do my part first and best.

My Life in Prison — By Donald Lowrie

A True Story of Years in Jail

TODAY'S INSTALMENT.

Copyright, 1912, by Mitchell Kennerley.

THE prisoners at San Quentin have not made a "break," they have enfranchised themselves in another way, and almost as incisively. On two occasions they have gone on strike, closed down the jute mill and disrupted the routine of the prison generally.

The first of these strikes occurred in the late 90's and lasted three days. In that strike, however, the prisoners made the mistake of going to their cells at night before they had gained their point. They were promptly locked in, and once under cover were helpless.

A fire hose was dragged from cell to cell and each man was "wet down" to cool him off. Food was also denied them, and gradually, one by one, they gave up and agreed to return to work. This strike was caused by insufficient food, served without being half cooked. The prisoners had grumbled at first. Then a few individuals, bolder than the rest, had openly complained, and had been punished, and that brought matters to a crisis. After it was all over there was a marked improvement of the food and in the manner of preparing it.

The strike of 1907, under Warden Edgar, while it did not assume the proportions of the other, was none the less serious, and the results secured were just as marked, if not more so.

Their Grievance

For months the staple articles of food, such as beans, flour, dried fruits and vegetables, had been wretched, frequently rotten. The contractors supplying these commodities had encroached upon the apathy of the purchasing department until they felt that they could do as they pleased and supply food that was practically refuse.

For several months before the strike occurred there was a steady grumble from the table, and many oral and written complaints to the warden, but without effect. One day when the prisoners returned to the mill after a particularly atrocious meal at noon the word was passed to quit work and assemble in the jute mill yard. A few men were afraid to obey and remained at their tasks. But when the leaders came around and threatened to "knock their blocks off" they saw their folly and joined in.

It was the union man and the scab of the outer world exemplified within prison walls. The principle of a working man's right to live like a man was at stake. Without realizing it, the prisoners were demonstrating the eternal right of unionism.

At first the guards in the mill tried to prevent the walkout, but soon abandoned the effort, realizing that they were powerless. After everyone was in the yard a council was held, and it was decided to send an ultimatum to the warden. Briefly, this ultimatum was that the warden should come down to the jute mill yard personally and give them his word that better food would be served, beginning with supper that night. If he did not come down in one hour, or if the six men who were chosen to convey the message were ill treated in any manner, the machinery in the mill would be demolished. If that did not bring results the mill would be burned.

Of course, the fact that a strike was in progress reached the office before the six emissaries—who were passed out of the mill yard by the officer in charge of the double gates—but the report was not taken seriously. After the committee of six had made known the ultimatum, however, the seriousness of the situation was apparent, and the warden declined to go down to the yard parley, as ordered.

I saw Warden Edgar as he and Captain Randolph were on their way to the mill. The warden's face was a study. During all his years' service as a subordinate prison official, when he was captain of the yard, he always despised convicts. Never for an instant had he admitted that a prisoner had any rights that an officer was bound to respect.

He and Randolph went to the mill. It was a nervy thing to do, but there was no alternative. The spokesman for the strikers made known the terms and the warden acceded to them without quibbling. The prisoners took him at his word—a tribute to the man even in his extremity—and went back to work.

Fruits of Victory

That afternoon a change was made in the dietary, and that night a wholesome supper was served. A good deal of the food on hand was condemned and destroyed, and the contractors were notified that they would be held strictly to the terms and specifications of their contracts in the future.

The warden had promised that none of the leaders of the strike would be discriminated against in the slightest degree a' they were not.

But during the years that followed, long after the strike had been forgotten, some of these men were reported at the office for infractions of the rules, and then they "got theirs."

The mistake made by the strikers was that they did not demand a new and more humane captain of the yard along with better "grub." Had they done this, had they reasoned above their diaphragms, San Quentin prison would now be well advanced toward serving the only purpose for which prisons should be maintained—the protection of society by the humanizing of the prisoners.

* * *

A FEW weeks ago I received a signed letter stating that I—a man guilty of two criminal convictions—had an "awful gall" to presume to tell people who have never broken the law how to conduct their affairs.

From the standpoint of the old order of things I have had an "awful gall," but from the standpoint of the new order, with the mothers and mothers-to-be holding a voice in affairs, and the general awakening of the genuine Christ spirit in the hearts of men, this "awful gall" is a desirable attribute.

I'm glad I have it. I hope I shall continue to have it, as I hope that this book, with its true accounts of some of the saddest phases of human life, will awaken or strengthen in many men and women the sense of comprehension and the ardent desire to helpful action.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

CERTAINLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-eight years old and deeply in love with a girl five years my senior. Do you consider the differences in our ages too great to marry? IN LOVE.

THE difference in your ages is too trifling to consider. It is on the side that is unfair to the girl, and if she is willing you should not object.

* * *

TOO YOUNG TO TRY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am fifteen and deeply in love with a boy of eighteen. I think he likes me, but is very bashful, I being the same. He is very homely and I am considered very pretty. I am a bookkeeper, while he is a college boy. How could I win his affection?

BECKIE

A GIRL of fifteen is too young to make such efforts with any advantage to herself. The boy is only eighteen, and in college. If you really love him, don't you want him to concentrate his mind on his books? Let love alone till you are old enough to realize its perils.

* * *

LET IT TAKE ITS COURSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A short while ago I attended a dance, where I met a young gentleman four years my senior. He accompanied me home that evening and other evenings. Of late he never asks me to dances with him. I like him very much, and would like to secure his friendship.

C. I. E.

IF he likes you he will give evidence all the sooner if you make no attempt to force his friendship.

Be friendly, but no more than with others, and do not, by word or sign, show him that you care for him.

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, NO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady twenty years of age and have never been in love, but there is a certain gentleman forty-two years of age who is very much infatuated with me. He has never asked me to marry him, but I do not care for him in any way. Now I know if I married him I would have everything I desired, for he has a very good position and is wealthy. Do you think I could be happy with this man? Should I wait until I meet the man I love?

STENOGRAPHER.

IF he were a multi-millionaire you would not be happy with him unless you loved him.

By all means wait till the right man comes along.

BY NO MEANS.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a man twenty-eight years old. I know that my love is reciprocated. However, all my friends say that he is too old for me and are trying to talk me out of marrying him. I do not expect to get married until I am about twenty.

Do you think the difference in our age is too great for our happiness? My parents think a great deal of him.

BETTY G.

HE is not a day too old for you. You believe in true love and your parents approve. Under the circumstances your friends are zealous to the extent of meddling.

Improving Virginia

PINK mesaline with pannier of rose point and a wee cluster of rosebuds on the ruffle of the fichu. "Invest-press-ibly sweet!" Kitty was an exclamation point of admiration.

Virginia regarded her younger sister with the supression of a yearning missionary. "Kitty, I wish you'd devote less thought to mere externals," she said.

Undisturbed, Kitty surveyed her sister, immaculate in nainsook, unrumpled, tailored linen. "Of course, Virginia, you're a distinguished settlement angel and all that, but if you don't think more about clothes you'll gradually drop off even the semi-feminine touches and emerge as Dr. Mary Walker," she declared severely.

"And sis really is a good looker," put in Tom.

Virginia, patient disapproval personified, absent-mindedly salted her breakfast food instead of her eggs. "A woman with a sense of her responsibilities," she murmured, "realizes that life is too short to waste on such a trivial consideration. Uplifting humanity——"

Tom said, "Excuse me!" and fled.

"Or the pursuit of some equally serious and worthy purpose should occupy her time and thought to the exclusion of frivolous, light headed——"

Kitty rose. "Sorry Jinny. I'd love to listen. Makes me feel like a little demon, but I'm going to don my ravishing pink batiste and loll over to Dorothy's. Her cousin, fresh from Harvard, arrived yesterday, and I think I'll wake up Bob to the pressing fact that if I chuck the welcome stranger to my chariot wheels, first chance."

Virginia Shocked

Virginia was truly shocked. "Kitty! Have you so far forgotten the modesty becoming a young woman newly engaged as to race off in actual pursuit of another young man?"

Kitty flushed, bit a retort in two and came over to rub her hand lovingly over Virginia's glossy curls, brushed into unwilling smoothness. "I can't do Dot's cousin a bit of harm," she said meekly, "because he isn't engaged. I wish you'd get Gerould saving humanity, Jinny, so you could have a good time with me. I've just six more months at home now."

Virginia slipped an arm around her sister. "I only hope I can lead you to a true appreciation of woman's life and work during those six months, Kitty. Why not begin by coping to the club with me this morning? I have a paper, 'The Influence of Woman in Civic Life.'"

Kitty's eyes sparkled critically. "I wish I could persuade you to cut off those ugly high collars in this hot weather. You've the prettiest throat of any one I know, and you bury it under all that stuffy finish. Collarless blouses are so fashionable, too."

Whizzing along in the Maynards' touring car that afternoon, Kitty and Dot's cousin from Harvard were discussing pictures versus blondes.

"By Jove!" he said enthusiastically, "I saw a splendid brunette on your street this morning. Having beauty. Italian eyes. Serious as a saint. Tall. Stately. I'm sure she never giggled in her life."

Kitty wriggled excitedly. "Awfully plain clothes?"

He stammered. "Um-er. Rather reminded me of a nurse's costume. Dot's promised me an early introduction, but that's as much as I can get out of her. Do you know her?"

Kitty laughed appreciatively. "She's my sister and a practical humanitarian."

"You don't say!" His face fell. "What'll I have to go in for to impress her? She thinks I'm frightfully rude. I forgot my manners completely and stared at her."

"Dot's going to bring you to dinner tomorrow night," said Kitty soothingly. "You'd better read up on social settlements."

She Is Perplexed

The next afternoon Kitty was applying powder over cold cream in anticipation of a round of tennis when Virginia appeared at her door, a blouse in one hand, a long pink ribbon and a scrap of lace in the other. Her eyes were perplexed and her face was flushed.

"Kitty, you know so much about fashion, will you advise me? Do you think some lace at the throat would be a pleasing feminine touch to this blouse? And is this pink too bright for a belt?"

In spite of the shock, Kitty contrived a coherent commonplace. "Very becoming, Jinny. Shall I tie the ribbon for you?"

Virginia handed it to her with a grateful look. "I wish to be a credit to the club this afternoon because I've been delegated to explain our settlement system to your friend Dorothy's cousin, Mr. Rogers. His aunt introduced him this morning after the kindergarten class. She told me in confidence that he has shown remarkable interest in settlement work."

Kitty choked and coughed hurriedly. "Look at yourself in the glass, sis," she said.

Virginia gasped. "You've improved me wonderfully, Kitty. Perhaps I ought to pay more attention to clothes."

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

A Valuable Remedy for Throat and Lungs.

The months of Eckman's Alterative, which is prepared by Dr. Eckman, of Conshohocken, are especially to mould of wonderful reports of remedies brought about solely through the use of this medicine. These reports are always at the command of its real interested, and many of the letters in these reports have suggested that our sufferers write direct and learn what it is for them. Here is one example:

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing before, but I wanted to see if I would find many cases like mine. I am perfectly well now, and I wish to express my heartfelt thanks. I feel just like a new man. I was all run down in health. Since a child of two years I have been subject to throat trouble, and for some years as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the trouble left me, and I could not hear from it. I finally grew up to manhood. Every summer I would have a bad spell of throat trouble, and would have to quit work. I would be sick for a month at one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and other troubles, but the throat was the worst, but have not anything of the kind this year.

"I will inclose all letters and so on, among which is one from my son, who was afflicted with lung trouble."

(Name withheld.)

Five years later reports still well.

Eckman's Alterative is sold by Hoagland's, Athens, May Pharmacy, Wood and Long Branches, and in nonbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all first-class Stores and Hospitals. Dutton Drug Store and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Conshohocken, Pa., for additional evidence.

A SURPRISE FOR THIN WOMEN

The secret of this remark lies not in the use of any drug, but in a certain way to put on flesh in place of poor, scrawny tissue. It has been solved by a little additional food and most thorough digestion of it. The moment you begin to put on flesh the pallor disappears—your face becomes attractive—even fascinating. The hollows in neck and arms disappear, a fairness and roundness within they never enjoyed and look years younger.

Just write today, saying "Send me your free book telling how I may put on flesh." Mention this paper, address Dr. Whitney's Nervura Medicine Co., 1 Nervura Building, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to write today, as this additional fact that will add so much to your attractiveness is a matter of real moment and should not be neglected.

No. 1 is the general flesh builder. No. 2 is for giving development to the bust alone and is a wonderful help to those parts of the body, as well as to the neck and arms.

CITY DUST'S DEATH TOLL PERIL IN MARKETS IS EXPOSED BY CASSIDY

H. P. Cassidy.

"The Dust's Death Toll" might be the title of today's article by Harry P. Cassidy. It was prompted by a walk through the market district Saturday morning, when the busiest day of the week was opening, and customers were already crowding the stalls in Quincy Market, and on the sidewalks and in the basements of the adjoining streets. Mr. Cassidy raps the negligence as a result of which meats and vegetables are covered with dust while displayed to purchasers along the sidewalks.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

A record breaking wind storm, under clear skies, swept Boston and the coast saturday. Injuries and even fatalities resulted when buildings were damaged, signs were blown down and tides were raised by the force of that wind.

But the record of these occurrences is insignificant beside the record—if we could only compile it—of those to whom the wind brought disease laden dust.

The city's dust and dirt is teeming with bacilli—many or most of them hostile to human health.

If you were in Boston's streets Saturday you got that dust—in your face, your eyes, your nose, your mouth.

And if you bought any food from stalls along the sidewalks you got an extra supply of it that the wind had dropped on the meat or vegetables.

Maybe it made you sick.

It didn't. We're absorbing bacilli all the time, and usually our systems are able to vanquish them and cast them out. But you got them, just the same, and took the chance.

I walked through the market district Saturday morning. Everywhere meat and vegetables were set out, often on the very curb, and the dust was thick on it. I saw one thing that moved very plainly just how much dust was dying.

It was a piece of ice. I didn't recognize it, I thought, as a matter of fact, that it was a brick.

It was lying beside the curb. The woman had set it there, I suppose, early in the morning, and for some reason it had not been taken into the store.

The dust had been settling on it all day. Wherever a grain of dust hit, it stuck. And the ice was a solid dirt color—unrecognizable except upon a close scrutiny.

Five feet away was a rock upon which were laid out the following meats:

A tray of sweetbreads.
A tray of lamb chops.
Three big cuts of beef.
Six dressed chickens.
And hanging on hooks above this pack were legs of mutton, some cuts of pork, and all the other display of a butcher's stock.

And the dust sifted down over everything.

Inside the Quincy Market the stalls were protected from the dust. The meats were displayed on marble slabs, or under otherwise sanitary conditions. There was some dust, of course, from the feet of the marketers, but this was slight compared to that in the streets outside.

Praises Quincy Market.

This market, by the way, is one of the best things I have seen in Boston. Coolings are excellent, and from what I saw, the prices are extremely reasonable. We had a market in Philadelphia, but the Boston market is as good or better.

I walked through the market first, then out along one of the streets leading to Hanover street. Here there was a very different story.

In four shops out of five the meat was displayed in the open, and although the wind was tearing off a man's hat every minute or two, and whipping women's garments about in brisk style, carrying always its quota of dust, there were few dealers who attempted to protect their wares.

Two devices appeared to be favorites, to keep off the dust. Many stores had sliding glass fronts drawn down over the meat, when the meat hung, except when a customer was being served. In those stores the meat cut on the counters was usually wrapped in clean white paper, except on the sheet-iron.

Both these devices are excellent, especially the glass-fronted cases. Their effect is to protect the customer from about 80 per cent. of the dust which accumulates on meat not so protected.

So far as I have been able to find there is nothing in the laws specifically dealing with this problem of protection from dust. Yet it is one of the most vital questions connected with the protection of public health.

The Dangers of Bacilli.

We breathe this dust. That cannot be helped, so long as our streets are not better cared for. But the food we eat ought to be protected.

The dust bacilli are of many kinds. From the spittle of one man comes the tuberculosis germ, and on the spittle dries the bacillus is whisked into the air and driven about till it finds lodgment—often on a piece of meat that offers an ideal culture surface—a perfect spot for the bacillus anxious to establish a little colony.

Every one with a skin disease of any kind, or with catarrh, or any one of the throat and lung diseases, throws off harmful bacilli. In fact, doctors say we all throw off bacilli calculated to do deadly harm if they strike the right spot. It is these bacilli that poison the air in a close room, for physicians now declare, from accidental cultivation experiment, that the same air may be breathed and re-breathed for hours without harm, unless germs are thrown off by those breathing it.

In addition to these "personal bacilli" (I may call them so, there are all the myriads of deadly organisms that develop in rotting vegetables or meat, and in filth and refuse of all kinds. There is much of this in the cities' fish markets, and the germs are carried from the old stock to the new by the dust-bearing wind, under the present unsanitary conditions.

When the problem of protecting food in our stores, from dust, is solved, your doctor and your undertaker are going to come upon hard times.

ONLY "CASCARETS" IF CONSTIPATED

Salts, Calomel and Cathartic Pills Act on Bowels as Pepper Acts in Nostrils.

Take a Cascaret tonight and thoroughly cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, have bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action, a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

These Are the People ducting the Most Wonde

We're justly proud of those men and women, for it is at their suggestion that this store took the most gressive step in its history, and it is entirely due to their efforts that this sale is surpassing in value ing and volume any sale event ever attempted by a New England Store—They were elected from ranks of our employes by their fellow workers. They claimed they would give us the biggest week house ever had if we would give them unrestricted control—We did it and they are more than "m good."

GIRLS FORCED TO LIVE ON EIGHT DOLLARS A WEEK TELL OF EXPERIENCES

Following up the discussion of the question, "Can a girl live on $8 a week in Boston?" letters are coming into the AMERICAN from all parts of the Metropolitan district. Some are in the affirmative; others say a decided "No" to the proposition.

For the five best letters in this controversy the AMERICAN will pay $10 each, for the ten next best, each writer will be paid $5. The award of the judges is final.

The letters to be considered must not be written on both sides of the paper.

"Hea" writes that in a Philadelphia department store, where she worked during 1907, 1908 and 1909, she was paid $6 a week. This she managed as follows:

Room rent	$1.50
7 breakfasts	.70
7 dinners	1.75
7 suppers	.70
Laundry	.15
Amusement	.25
Clothing, dentistry, etc...	.50
Total	$5.50

This girl walked to work in the morning and back in the evening. She is now a clerk in Boston, getting $8. She does her own millinery, which she says has not cost her $10 in ten years. She warns girls against expensive dress and fast amusements.

Another girl writing from Roslindale—she is now married—tells how she used to manage on a weekly wage of $6:

Room	$1.50
Week's breakfasts and dinners cooked on stove	2.00
Lunches	1.05

She rode on cars only on rainy days and thus had a balance of $1.15 in stormy to $1.45 in fine weather every week. She did her own laundry and made her own clothes.

Another girl, living in Allston, said she never got more than $8 a week. She roomed with a private family and had breakfast and supper for $3.50 a week and did her own washing and ironing. In Boston, she says, it is impossible for a girl who rents a room and gets her meals outside to live on $8. It will cost at least $7 to do this, leaving but $1 for other necessaries. In the other case, even paying $3 extra for a noonday lunch she had a $2.50 balance.

A girl in Lynn says her weekly expenses are:

Board (Cooking her own meals)	3.00
Room	.75
Clothes and other expenses	2.00
Lunches for week	.350
Total	$6.26

A writer from Somerville says:

"If a girl on leaving home has a good stock of clothes in her trunk, and a little money, she can exist in Boston on a salary of $8, but it will necessitate the strictest economy. She spent:

Room	$2.00
Lunches	1.40
Breakfasts and dinners	3.50
Total	$7.00

For diversion she visited the Public Library and Art Museum and Dalrymple street, admiring the store windows. Finding she had no margin for clothes or other charges, she left her employer she could not stay for $8 a week. He increased it to $9. Getting another girl to share her room, her lot then became easier.

Editor AMERICAN:

I have taken your daily paper for years and have always been amused at the different contests. I read with interest your article on woman's wage, and I feel compelled to write, for this is something of which I know much about. Can a woman live self-respecting on $8.00 per week? Yes, and others will respect her also. I am a widow with a daughter in high school, who has to be fed and clothed suitably, for a girl of today in her class, I go out by the day dressmaking at $2 per day. Taking the two months or more in Summer when almost everyone who hires their sewing done is away, I average four days a week for the entire year, making a total earning of $8 per week for two. How do I spend it? As follows:

Rent, per week	$2.00
Heat and gas	.50
Meat	.50
Fruit	.50
Vegetables	.50
Butter	.20
Soap and starch for washing, bread we make our own	.15
Milk	.10
Insurance	.12
Church and Sunday school	.25
American (can't do without it)	.06
Total	$5.81
Balance for clothing, "No gum, amusement or candy."

How to Make $8 Do.

Editor AMERICAN:

To the eight-dollar-a-week girl: Once upon a time, not so very long ago, I was an eight-dollar-a-week girl. That is why I can take an active interest in the girls who are working for that amount.

I started in as assistant bookkeeper in a small office in one of the big cities. I was living at the Y. W. C. A. and had worked my way through business college.

I should advise every girl who comes into a strange city to work, to go to the Y. W. C. A. if there is one. There it is more like home. There is more of a Christian spirit than in a family that is strange to one. There are advantages, too, that one does not get in a private home. For a very small sum, ten cents a week, I think, ten pieces of clothing may be sent to the home laundry to be washed and ironed and on certain nights the laundry is open for the use of the girls. That saves the laundry bill.

The board and meals there are about the same as one would be able to get anywhere. For a long time I paid $1.00 for my room and $3.25 for board. There is $4.25 out of eight dollars, the minute one gets her pay envelope. Not very encouraging when one needs a suit, hat or something equally expensive and the girls must keep on a par of what they are successful in their positions. They must look neat and clean and as attractive as possible. No lavishly dressed, but neatly and suitably, with pretty neckwear, belts, etc.

Now, girls get busy and make your own clothes. Watch the sales, get some neat striped cloth for a shirtwaist or two. You can easily get cloth for two tailored waists for less than one dollar. Patterns are not very expensive, and thread and buttons do not cost much. Sit in the evening instead of going to moving picture show and sew. Get together and make your shirtwaists. Get up a little earlier in the morning and make the bottom holes. It won't hurt you, even though you do get terribly tired in the office or shop.

Get your cloth for a skirt the next week, and look around and find some one who will do the hardest part of it for a reasonable price, then finish it yourself.

Don't buy fancy things, girls; get the pretty striped waistings which do not soil as easily as white, and a dark skirt of some soft woolen material which will not show the dust, and which will not "slicker" easily. Above all, get clothes which are appropriate for any ordinary evening. You'll do as the poor girl did last Summer. She spent her month's allowance for a white taffeta silk, white outing hat, shoes and stockings and a red sweater, and then didn't have a thing to wear to the office.

Another thing which will help one a whole lot is an account book. Keep a strict account of every penny you spend and you will be surprised at the end of a month how much money you have spent on things that were foolish.

I don't mean to cut out pleasure, for every one needs something bright and pleasing, and it helps to make work easier. Go to a good play once in a while. One can usually get seats in a "second" part of the theatre for 25 or 30 cents.

It is nice, too, to keep a bank for small change. I saved my pennies for a half year and had $2 when I opened it. It is a fine start from, and my roommate had as in pennies and nickels.

It is surely a problem for the girl who only receives $8 a week, to get on comfortably, but it can be done, for I have done it, and I even helped out at home a few dollars.

With the most careful planning, one can hardly have everything new at one time. By the time one has saved enough for a suit, the shoes are nearly worn out, and the suit will begin to be shabby by the time the hat and gloves appear, but cheer up, girls, be as sensible as you can, and still have as good a time as you can. I'm afraid I haven't helped you much, but I really think that if our girls would do more of their sewing, and use their common sense in choosing clothes, the problem of living would be much simpler. Don't blame it all on the "high cost of living," but show the world that you can live clean, wholesome lives in spite of the obstacles put in your way.

E-YAH JENNINGS DETROIT TIGER

The famous diamond star has joined the AMERICAN'S sporting staff and will contribute daily stories of interest to Boston fans. Tomorrow he will take over complete charge of the sporting pages. Don't miss this treat. : : : : : : : :

SPORTING EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN

Hughey Jennings Writes First Article for American Readers

By HUGHEY JENNINGS.

Well, here I am right on the job and it is indeed a pleasure to be back in Boston, even though there is no game at stake.

I have always liked Boston, and today, if I were through with the Detroit club, I would prefer to come to this city rather than any other in the country.

Boston baseball "fans" are loyal. They are with the team whether it is winning or losing. They always give an opposing team a square deal and show their appreciation of any good play made by a visiting player.

In some cities in which I have been I have seen "fans" stand up and critic ize the work of a player if he failed to make a hit or missed a grounder. But not so in Boston. Encouragement is all that Boston "fans" know. If you fail they will say "well, that's just as liable to happen to any man."

Ball Players Praise Boston.

I have talked to thousands of ball players during my long career and have yet to meet one who had a bad word for Boston or its baseball public.

Well, to get down to business. Tomorrow I will act in the official role of a sporting editor of the AMERICAN. I have been handed the reins and will have full charge of the sporting section. Every piece of copy that is printed on the sport pages will have been edited by myself. I will write the headlines and "make up" the pages. Of course, the sporting editor will give me a few tips, but these will be of minor importance.

Before I start, I wish to have a few words with the readers of the AMERICAN. I hope they will take as kindly to me as a sporting writer as they do on the ball field.

While I am filling a theatrical engagement at the National Theatre, I will be able to spend much time each day in preparing an article on baseball that will be of interest to the local baseball public.

Makes Reply to Briggs.

I learned through reports from the East, while I was in Chicago, that Dean Le Baron R. Briggs of Harvard, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, does not take kindly to my style of coaching on the ball field. Of course, this is all a matter of opinion. Everyone takes a different view of things.

I feel sorry that I have displeased Mr. Briggs in any way, but for myself I do not see anything wrong with my coaching methods.

Coaching is one of the principal parts of a ball game. Without it the game would lack interest. I do not go through those funny stunts for nothing. They help to with ball games, in my opinion.

While I am in Boston I would like to argue out my point with Mr. Briggs if it is satisfactory to him.

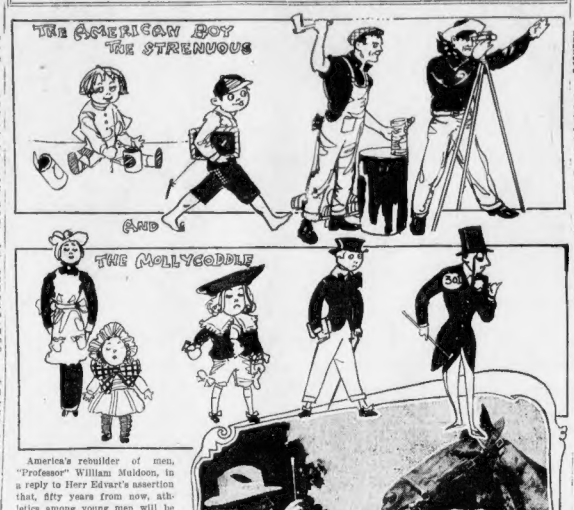
As I said before, I always like to come to Boston and I earnestly hope that I will please the Boston public in my baseball sketch. I have said many times that the stage is no place for ball players. But what can you do when theatrical managers hound you around, ask you to sign a contract, tell you what a big bill you'll be and how anxious the theatregoers are to see you on the stage? And then again the money part is the big temptation.

Lost Weight on Stage.

I have taken particular notice to one thing in connection with the stage, and that is you can lose weight much quicker than at a Spring training camp. During my first few weeks on the stage I lost between five and six pounds.

In conclusion, I hope that the readers of the AMERICAN will appreciate my efforts as an editor.

RICH MAN'S SON THE MOST USELESS THING IN THE WORLD



America's rebuilder of men, "Professor" William Muldoon, in a reply to Herr Edvart's assertion that, fifty years from now, athletics among young men will be a "kid glove affair," declares that the half century will see the entire elimination of the rich young man of today who might give grounds for the scientists assertion.

Muldoon Dispels Gloom of Herr Edvarts on "Kid Glove" Athletics.

Scientific and practical opinions on the American youth of the future clashed today with a reverberation that should cause many ear-bursings.

A German scientist started the trouble. He is Louis D. Edvarts of Washington, and his theory regarding the young man of fifty years from now is not nice.

His statement: "Fifty years from now athletics among American young men will be rather a kid-glove affair, making them rather delicate, over-groomed creatures,' was carried to William Muldoon, rebuilder of men, in his sanitarium at White Plains. Mr. Muldoon's eyes twinkled when he heard what the scientist predicted.

"Did Herr Edvarts have too much New Year's?" he asked.

The trainer was assured that purely scientific reasons had prompted Herr Edvarts' remarks, and then Mr. Muldoon settled down to a serious talk.

People Eager to Build Health.

"The professor is wrong," he said. "There never was a time in the history of the world when people desired to build their health as they do now. People are beginning to realize more and more that it is the survival of the fittest, both in body and brain, that counts. Fifty years from now the useful young men will be running this country, not the rich men's sons."

"The rich men's sons?"

"Yes. They represent the greatest danger to the youth of this country. They continually set a bad example, and act as a drawback to the quickest development of the American boy.

"There are many evils to beset the youth of this land, but the greatest of these are rum, tobacco and immorality. And the greatest of the three is immorality. Stunting of morals gathers rum and tobacco with it, and the rich man's son is the chief offender."

Mr. Muldoon paused, and turned as if to say that the interview was at an end, but the reporter quickly repeated a little more of Herr Edvarts' sayings as follows:

"American colleges are doing much to hinder this retrogressive movement by fostering athletics."

Slump of Athletic Collegians.

"That is true," said Mr. Muldoon. "Athletics in the colleges is a grand thing, but most of the college youths stop their exercising after they leave. They think they exercise, perhaps, but they don't. They unconsciously try to avoid effort. They go out and play a few games of tennis and think they are benefiting themselves, when, as a matter of fact, they don't, because they don't know the first rudiments of exercise. They avoid real effort, and the exercise does them no good."

Mr. Muldoon then returned to the subject of the rich man's son. He admitted that this particular individual had become somewhat of an obsession with him, describing him figuratively as a human bookworm in the hold of athletics.

"I don't take rich men's sons in here," said Mr. Muldoon, waving a hand around the room in his health resort, "but if I had a place ten times as large I could not accommodate all who seek admission. The millionaire's son in college is a detriment and a real danger. They are the most useless members of humanity. They ought to be numbered instead of named.

Blames Girls and Hobble Skirts.

"And now I don't want to be ungallant, but our girls are also to blame for retarding the progress of our youths. The hobble skirt has done a lot to bring on an increase of immorality. A lot of people may laugh when they hear I said that, but it's true.

"The hobble skirt has brought about many queer marriages. A young man who otherwise would not deign to look at a certain type of girl if she were dressed properly, loses his head over her in flip time when she parades past him wearing a hobble.

"The first thing you know he has run off with her and married her, to regret it ever afterward. Parents could help their sons a whole lot in this. Let them reason with their boys, and point out that love isn't what they think it is, but is from the soul. Love, real love, is a grand thing."

"How about the rum and tobacco?"

Less Drink, More Tobacco.

"The use of tobacco is on the increase, I am sorry to say. I don't think that the young men of this country are drinking as much as their grandfathers did, but there is still a lot of it going on. A boy can easily see the effects of drink on others, which touches him a lesson if he is sensible, but that is not so often the case with tobacco. He sees his elders, and sometimes his women relatives, smoking cigarettes, and this leads him to think there is no harm in them. This is a very real danger to the American youth, and too much could not be said on that subject."

"Then you don't think that the youth of fifty years from now will be of slight frame, wear a monocle, carry a short, delicate walking stick and go through endless bathings and manicurings, as Professor Edvarts would have us believe?"

"No," said Mr. Muldoon, "that applies only to the rich man's son, and they will not be in the majority fifty years from now. I get up at 6 o'clock this morning and feel at fit as a fiddle. Therefore I am optimistic. I don't think Herr Edvarts exercises enough."

Harvard and Ottawa Sevens to Clash At the Arena Tonight

The Lineup.

HARVARD.		OTTAWA.
Hopkins, l.w.		r.w., O'Neil
Fielding, c.		Dore or Poulin
Bothwell, r.w.		l.w., Nagle
Morgan, l.w.		r.w., Gartland or Reid
Claflin, c.p.		c.p., Goodwin
Wilson, r.p.		l.p., O'Leary
Gardner, g.		g., Minnock or De Mosse

A fast and interesting game is expected when the Harvard and Ottawa hockey teams clash at the Boston Arena tonight. The canadians have made a good record on the ice this season and are sure to give the University City team a hard battle for the premier laurels.

The Canadian collegians have taken part in a number of ice contests during their tour through this country and are in perfect condition. It is true that they lost two out of four games to the Cleveland A. C., but one must not forget that the Forest City seven is rated among the best in the country.

The Arena management intends to make an effort to have the Ottawa players remain in this city for a few days in order that they may clash with the speedy M. A. A. five on Wednesday night.

HARRY JENSEN, STAR MARATHON RUNNER, TO RESIDE HERE

Another important addition to the ranks of the local athletes will soon be made when Harry Jensen, the famous long distance star of New York, will locate permanently in this city.

Jensen, who is the city on business, has announced his purpose, saying that his business affairs will undoubtedly cause him to locate here for at least five years, beginning January 29.

Followers of the Marathon specialty have especial reason to had his coming with gratification as his performances are particularly well known locally. While he has never figured as the winner of the B. A. A. Marathon, he has always come over from New York as one of the pronounced favorites and has usually managed to land well up among the leaders at the finish.

FOREIGN MARKSMEN TO COMPETE IN BIG RIFLE SHOOT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The National Rifle Association will meet here Thursday to consider arrangements for the target matches to be held at Camp Perry, Ohio, next Summer. The association matches will be held August 18 to 26; the national matches August 25 to 29, and the international matches September 1 to 5. In the international matches, it is expected, there will b representatives not only from the union of international rifle associations and the Pan-American Shooting Union, but also from countries not having members in those organizations, and it is expected as many as twenty-two foreign teams will compete in the team matches.

BOBBIE M'LEAN IS WINNER OF RACE

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Robert McLean, international amateur ice skating champion, won the Nestor Johnson trophy here yesterday, skating the time in 3:05. The course was laid out on a park lagoon. The champion was taken ill with scarlet fever several weeks ago, and had been out of bed but ten days. He skated against the advice of his physicians.

$300,000 TIGER STADIUM.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 6.—The erection of a $300,000 stadium within the next year was made a certainty today through the approval of the plans by the athletic committee.

POEHLER MEETS HINTZE IN BIG MATCH TONIGHT

Paul Poehler, the candlepin champion of New England, will bowl the first half of a twenty-string match with Harvey Hintze at the Congress Alleys of Chelsea tonight.

This match, being the first one of importance that Poehler has engaged in this Winter, has created much interest in local bowling circles. The match should be well attended.

Poehler is anxious to begin well and incidentally even up terms with Hintze, who defeated him in a special match last Winter.

Poehler, because of his consistent work this season, is the favorite. He has taken part in every City League match, sixteen in all, and has put up an average of 107, his nearest competitor being four points in the rear of him.

Championship Pool Tourney Is to Open Tonight.

The annual New England pool tournament opens at the White Bear Billiard Hall tonight. The following players are entered: Arthur Wood, present New England champion; Gilliseis, Upton, Blakeley, Ephardt, Simonds and Ingraham. Gilliseis and Upton will meet in the opening match.

Alexander Is Forced to Vacate Quarters.

Philip Alexander, proprietor of the Old Colony Alleys, has retired permanently from the bowling game. The building in which his alleys are located is being remodeled and he has been forced to vacate. Mr. Alexander has made numerous friends during his bowling career, all of whom regret his retirement.

Colonial Club Battles Newtowne on Alleys.

The Colonial Club has an excellent opportunity to drive its way into second position in the Suburban Interclub League tonight when it meets Newtowne. Although Colonial is now in fifth position, a four-point victory will put them on the chase after the Cottage Park team.

GOOD PROGRAM FOR ARTILLERY GAMES

The annual handicap games of the Massachusetts Coast Artillery Corps, M. V. M., will be held at the South State Armory, Irvington street, on Saturday evening, January 13, 1913, at 7:30 o'clock. The following events will be contested, open to all amateur athletes registered with the A. A. U.: 75-yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, 1-mile run, running high jump, 10-lap relay races.

M'Aleer to Stand Pat on 1912 Team for Next Season

President James R. M'Aleer of the champion Red Sox is back in town after spending the holidays at his home in Youngstown, O. M'Aleer intends to depend upon the team which won the world's championship last Fall to repeat again this year. The Red Sox chieftain said today:

With one exception, I wish to keep the same players I had last season, the men who won two championships, and I shall do everything in my power to hold them together for the season of 1913.

All clubs in the league have waived on Pape, and I shall dispose of him. I have talked with Joe Tinker, the new manager of the Cincinnati club, in regard to him, but we have not come to any understanding.

No one has approached me with regard to a trade of any other player on the team, nor have I approached any one with a view to a trade or the sale of any man who was on the club last year, with the one exception I have mentioned.

The boys look good to me, and I shall have them all back next year if it is in my power to get them, and if we have no bad luck I believe my shall be able to repeat by winning the championship again in 1913.

Strong Track Team Expected at Tufts for this Season

The first week's work of the Tufts College track team candidates, under the direction of Coach MacDonald, has been most successful. The work up to date has only been with the relay team candidates.

A large squad of men reported every afternoon for work and the material is most promising. Tufts has not had a track coach for a number of years and the development of the men in a single week under his able coaching has been wonderful.

John A. MacDonald, the former Vermont man, who is coaching the team, seems to be an ideal man in the position which he holds. Because of his straightforward and outspoken manners he has won the confidence and favor of all the men so that they are all bound to do their best to make good.

The squad is so large that it has been divided into squads to facilitate coaching and work. There has been no cut in the squad to date, and the first elimination of the less promising athletes won't come until the last of next week.

The first meet in the Tufts relay team will compete will be against Vermont in the B. A. A. meet. The most promising men in the squad are Captain R. W. Atwater '13, Flint '13, Whippen '13, Mansfield '13, Horty '13, Cole '14, Bisbee '14, Teele '15, Hewitt '15, Bisbee '15, Allen '15, Scrannage 15, Aldrich '15, Holland '15, Herr '16, Swenson 16, Lotz '16, Katz '16, McCollin '16, McJannett '16, Sherborne '16, Rose '16, Gore '16, Upton '16, Holden '16 and Lee 16.

LOCKE SAYS HE HAS NO USE FOR DONLIN WITH THE PHILLIES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 6.—Mike Donlin seems slated for the minors or doomed to earn his living exclusively by his histrionic abilities. All gossip in Mike's future with the Philadelphia club has stilled when Henry Locke, president of the Quakers, said he did not intend to retain the "hitter" on the payroll. It is a certainty that Mike will never go to a minor league club as a player unless he is also manager or part owner of the club. Mike said so when he was in Pittsburgh several weeks ago.

Locke, although an admirer of Donlin as a player and especially as a hitter, says his days as a big league outfielder are numbered. Mike was slow on his feet last season. As he confesses that he could not play in the Philadelphia sunfield, his usefulness to the club would be only as a pinch hitter.

BASEBALL BOARD TO MEET TODAY

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 6.—The National Baseball Commission will hold its annual meeting in this city today. Unlike the majority of the former annual meetings, there is no one case to come before the body that stands out prominently over the others.

The commission will hear the report of its chairman, August Hermann; its secretary, John A. Heydler, and then elect its officers for the ensuing year. There has been no intimation other than that both of the above-named officials will be reelected.

SUTTON OUT TO WIN BACK FORMER TITLE

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 6.—The billiard match for the 18.1 balk line championship will be played Thursday night between George Sutton of Chicago and Orlando Morningstar, champion. Sutton won the 18.1 championship from William F. Ziegler at the Hotel Astor, New York, on March 15, and held it until May 18, when Morningstar defeated him by a score of 500 to 463. Sutton, as usual, has been playing in practice games with Calvin Demarest.

STEVE KENNEDY MEETS GALLANT IN TITLE BOUT

By JACK CONWAY.

GILBERT GALLANT of Chelsea and Steve Kennedy, who hails from Lawrence, will meet in one of the most important ring contests of the week at the Unity Club in Lawrence on Friday evening. The men are scheduled to box twelve rounds and the winner will claim the lightweight championship of New England.

The bout has aroused a tremendous amount of interest in local boxing circles and is sure to be witnessed by a big crowd. All Lawrence will turn out in order to root for Kennedy while a big delegation of fight "fans" from this city and Chelsea will make the trip to the mill city in order to cheer Gallant on to victory.

There will be intense rivalry between the two men. Gallant recently challenged any lightweight in New England, through this column, and Jim Crilley, manager of Kennedy, sent the writer a letter in which he stated that his protege was perfectly willing to swap punches with Gallant within a twenty-four-foot ring. A meeting was then arranged between Alex McLean, manager of Gallant, and Crilley, and the articles for the battle were drawn up.

YOUNG M'DONOUGH, the popular Manchester lightweight, boxes Jimmy Fryer of Philadelphia at Westfield tonight. McDonough is one of the best men of his weight in this section of the country and may always be relied upon to make a good showing. His recent draw bout with Jack Britton proved what kind of "stuff" he is made of.

Jimmy Moriarty, the veteran Lowell middleweight, is scheduled to meet Kid Flemming at Augusta, Me., on next Wednesday evening.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

CHARLIE EBBETS of the Brooklyn club, took a shot at the National League dove of peace last week and the bird flew off, leaving a few feathers scattered around. The poor old pigeon has a hard time of it and probably always will.

The trouble this time arises from a scheme of Ebbets to open his new ball park in Brooklyn a few days ahead of the regular National League schedule. Ebbets always wants something a little different from the others in the way of schedules. He insisted on extending the National League season to include Columbus Day which falls on October 12. The other managers stood for it a year or two and then sat down on the Brooklyn man.

Other ball clubs have opened new parks, but they never wanted a special opening. Everybody but the Brooklyn man has been willing to take things as they come without a special day in which the eyes of the world will be focussed on one ball park. The Red Sox opened a new park last year, but the owners of the club did not get into a fight with President Hon Johnson over it. When the American League schedule was issued they knew the date of their opening, but not before.

BUT Ebbets wants a special date for himself and when President Lynch of the National League said it would be impossible to favor a particular club Ebbets declared war at once. He said:

"What has Lynch got to do with this any way? Why should he butt in on something that concerns only the club owners, and not him? He is not an owner, would not be interested in the financial aspect of the question and has no business cutting in on the case one way or the other.

"I have already written to Billy Locke, who will be president of the Phillies, outlining the proposition for such a game, and think we can pull it off. A favorable vote of six clubs in the league is all that is necessary to change the schedule, and the clubs concerned can vote on the question."

AT first it was Ebbets' idea to have the Giants for his early opening. That sent President Gaffney of the Boston club in the air, for he had counted on opening in New York against the Giants. Gaffney called Ebbets on the phone and demanded an explanation. The Brooklyn man replied that the Giants plan had been dropped, but that he counted on securing the Phillies for the opening attraction. Just how Mr. Gaffney stands on the Brooklyn-Philadelphia proposition is not known.

The trouble comes at a time when everyone thought that affairs in the National League would run along smoothly for a spell. Ebbets fought Lynch for several years, but it looked as though the hatchet had been buried for all time when the Brooklyn man nominated Lynch for president at the National League meeting three weeks ago.

THE Bresnahan claim has been settled "out of court" just as this column said it would be settled a day or two after Bresnahan was canned by Mrs. Helene Britton, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals. There was a cash settlement on Saturday. Just how much Bresnahan got out of it no one but the persons involved knows. And it is no one's business but those persons. Bresnahan is now free to sign with any National League club that suits his fancy. It is only that Cincinnati, Chicago or Pittsburgh will get him.

EVERYBODY is picking the Pirates to win the National League flag next season. This makes it a good bet that the Pirates will not win it. When one comes to analyze the situation it is hard to find where the Pirates figure any better than they did last season. Where are they any stronger?

CHARLIE HALL and Harry Hooper of the Red Sox are playing ball out in California. Hall is on a team managed by Fred Snodgrass whose disastrous bout helped the Red Sox win the last game of the world's series. Snodgrass plays first base and manages the team. For battery mate Hall has Chief Myers of the Giants. Shafer of the Giants and Easterly of the White Sox are also on the team managed by Snodgrass.

On the team that Hooper plays with are Ellis and Bites of the Cardinals, and Overall, the big pitcher, formerly of the Cubs. Snodgrass leads the league with a percentage of .800. In this same league are also such well known players as George Stovall, manager of the Browns; Earl Hamilton, also of the Browns, Cravath of the Phillies, Olsen of the Naps, Fromme of the Reds and others.

AMOS RUSIE, who has just been sent to jail for cruelty for threatening his wife, is considered the greatest pitcher of all time by those well known baseball men: Burkett, McAleer, Maul, Keeler, Lange, Sam Thompson, and others too numerous to mention. When such men as these pick Rusie the average fan of today may well ask himself, "What sort of a wonder was this man anyway?"

Yale Football Men Finally Decide to Have a Paid Coach

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 6.—For the first time in history Yale will have a paid football coach.

Captain Henry Ketcham of the eleven has announced that he would choose a graduate to head the coaching next Fall under salary. He will be aided by a committee of five in making his selection. He named Walter Camp one of the committee, and stated that he would choose the other four members in about two weeks.

Under the Yale athletic constitution it is impossible at present to select a coach for more than one year. It is expected, however, that the coach who is chosen next season will remain for several years, being appointed by successive Yale captains.

Captain Ketcham said today that four different schemes were recommended at the meeting of the former Yale captains. One was to make Walter Camp supreme head coach; another was to continue the present system; still another was to choose a paid coach for several seasons. The fourth was to adopt the system which Captain Ketcham has decided to put into effect.

FARRELL SURE OF CHANCE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Frank Farrell, owner of the New York Americans, was confident that he would have Frank Chance, whom he will meet in Chicago on Tuesday, under contract before tomorrow night, to manage the club during the coming season.

WILLARD DODGES MATCH.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Jesse Willard, only heavyweight who has anything on Luther McCarty, has declined an offer to meet Gunboat Smith at Oakland, Cal., February 1. Willard asserted he would not fight again until he has a chance to meet McCarty.

MET TO NAME YALE COACH.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 6.—Captain Henry Ketcham of the Yale football team today busied himself in selecting a committee which will choose a successor for the bulldog squad. Frank Hilfiker, Pudge Heffelfinger and Howard Jones are leading candidates for the coaching job.

TINKER AFTER KLING.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, told friends in Chicago today that he is after Johnny Kling to work with Mordecai Brown as star battery for Cincinnati next season. Tinker said he has made an offer to Roger Bresnahan, former manager of the Cardinals.

M'GOORTY BOUT PUT OVER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The bout between Eddie McGoorty and Freddie Hicks, scheduled for this week, has been postponed on account of the illness of McGoorty.

CHESS EXPERT TO PLAY.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—D. Janowski, the great French chess expert, will soon leave for New York to take part in the American National Chess Masters' tournament.

O'Brien May Be Elected Leader of the Harvard Eleven for 1913

The era of the election of the Harvard football captain brings with it a new possibility. It is the candidacy of F. J. O'Brien, the speedy end, who, throughout the season, after Coolidge was hurt, handled one of the terminal positions for Harvard with a speed and dispatch which was remarkable even to those who knew him.

Like the other candidates for the job he is a lineman. He is a junior, and therefore, under the traditional Harvard system, is eligible for the captaincy of the greatest branch of Harvard athletics.

The difficulty in the situation lies in the fact that up to now the captain has merely been the executive of the advisory board. Now, however, he will have to strike out on his own initiative, this being particularly true in view of Mr. Garcelon's retirement. What will have to be done next year on the gridiron will be work which is more important than has ever been done by any captain since the old days of purely undergraduate control.

It is up to next year's team, and mainly to next year's captain, whether or not a second dual series with Princeton is negotiated. The discussions for that are already under way, and when the schedule is made known it will show that a remarkable amount of work is being gone through with by the committee which has that in charge. The captain will have to make the pace with regard to this set of games, not merely for next season, but for a number of years to come.

There are, of course, a large number of men on the squad who would like to see Jack O'Brien get the job, and who hope he will arrive. It is, however, unfortunate that he was not one of the big four in the Yale game who made the line the ironclad affair that it was in the earlier part of the game.

There is a good deal to show, however, that this boy deserves the honor as much as some others on the team, and that he has as good a chance to materialize on it as have men perhaps more fortunate in their playing positions.

Should Garcelon finally decide that he cannot give much time to Harvard athletics there will be another question for the captain to settle. What is to be the coaching policy of the team if a new coach has to be secured? The Yale former policy of making the stars of one year coaches for the following season may appeal to some, but the Harvard policy has always been to find a good man and then stay by him and to make it worth his while to stay by Harvard. Spring football coaching will begin in a matter of eight weeks, and that question has got to be faced and faced quick, more than 50,000 people.

Princeton to Have Mammoth Stadium

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 6.—The erection of a new athletic stadium for the Princeton Athletic Association, tentative plans for which have been under way for some time, is now practically a certainty, according to a statement made by Dean McClenahan, chairman of the board of athletic control. There are still a number of important details which must be worked out before any definite announcements can be made, but that the Tigers will have a stadium within the next couple of years is assured.

The proposed structure will cost in the neighborhood of $300,000 and will seat

An Exciting Tale of Love and Adventure

The story of the play of the same name now being produced in New York.

PART I.

He had barely assumed his motionless posture, with his chest swelling out at his forethought, when Mrs. Beamish entered, followed at a distance by a woman in the shabby weeds of a poor widow.

Myrtle turned and came face to face with Mrs. Beamish. The latter had known that Tom Lambert was to guide the Falconhurst servants through the place and had drawn her own conclusions.

"Good evening, ma'am," said Myrtle quite respectfully.

"More than can be said of the evening's work," commented the outraged Mrs. Beamish, as she glanced about. "Where's your accomplice?"

Mrs. Beamish Is Jealous

"My what, ma'am?" the girl asked.

"The man you've been keeping an assignation with," snapped Lady Diana's companion.

"I have kept no assignation with any man," the girl said, her tones still respectful toward this woman whose jealousy she knew and sympathized with.

"You may tell that to the marines, my girl," went on the jealous woman, "I know better, and you ought to. A man old enough to be your father, and ugly enough to frighten the crows."

"I don't"—— began Myrtle.

"You may go now," said Mrs. Beamish, and Myrtle, who had not relished this scene with the jealous woman, went at once.

As Mrs. Beamish turned from the girl she brushed against the woman who had been following her.

"What do you want, pray?" asked the elderly dame of Lambert.

"Nothing, madam," returned the woman. "I thought you seemed to want somebody."

"So I do and only let me catch him," snapped Mrs. Beamish.

"If you could describe him, my lady," said the other.

"I can't. Language fails—dictionary language."

"What's he like?"

Mrs. Beamish had been looking about her hastily, seeking Lambert. Her eyes for the past few moments had been traveling down a line of the murderers in the jury box. Suddenly they rested upon the posing Lambert and recognized him.

Looking the Part

"So that's it, is it?" she remarked in her harshest and driest voice. "The Wretch." Lambert, however, seeing her eyes turn from him, was sure that she had not recognized him.

To the other woman Mrs. Beamish turned and the pointing to the murderers she asked for Lambert's benefit:

"What are those?"

"Those are murderers, madam," said the woman.

"They look it," returned Mrs. Beamish, her voice cutting through Lambert, "every man Jack of them—especially that one in the corner with the hideous red face." She glanced into the catalogue she carried. "No. 9—Dr. Crippen. Just what I should have guessed. You can see the man is a monster of wickedness."

"So you can, my lady," agreed the other.

Lambert shook in his boots, but not with amusement.

"Crime written large across his ugly face in every line of it," resumed Mrs. Beamish, who was having her revenge entirely unknown to her victim. "And there are a good many of them—a hardened old villain. I could believe anything of a man with that face."

"So could I, my lady," agreed readily her companion.

"Yes—and he's extraordinarily like a man I've known and suspected for a long time."

"Lor', lady, that ain't no compliment to the gentleman."

"He isn't a gentleman," said Lambert's punisher. "He's quite a common person—and behaves himself as such."

"...ou don't say so, lady!"

"Don't I, though! And that's nothing to what I could say. But there, I can't look at the creature. It makes me quite ill, and I'm tired. I shall sit down for a bit—until they turn the people out."

Taking Her Revenge

She wonted herself directly below the jury box and beneath Lambert. Involuntarily the trainer, who had been finding it difficult to hold his pose and keep his face as expressionless as wax, groaned.

Instantly the woman who had been talking with Mrs. Beamish exclaimed:

"Lor, what was that!"

"What?"

"Didn't you hear it? Sounded like a groan."

Mrs. Beamish had known perfectly what the sound was, but she had a very definite plan in her mind regarding Lambert, and she pretended that she hadn't heard.

"Well, why not?" she responded. "It's the Chamber of Horrors. I dare say it's done by machinery—somebody suffering tortures—or on the rack—or something."

As Mrs. Beamish laid her gold mesh bag down on the bench beside her, just under a sign, "Beware of pickpockets," the other woman sank down on the bench with a smothered "Oh!"

"What's the matter?" asked Mrs. Beamish, anxiously.

"It's my hunger, my lady," she said. "I'm out of work. I haven't had a morsel of food all day. I came in here thinking that some kind of person might assist me, but—"

Mrs. Beamish passed to the other a very handsome bottle of smelling salts, which the woman kept.

"Feel any better?" asked Mrs. Beamish.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Household Hints

Sleepless nights may be averted by one or other of the following simple remedies: Hot milk—which, however, should not be boiled—if taken the last thing at night, will be found to induce sleep very readily. An onion, either raw in slices or well boiled, is most efficacious. The disagreeable taste may be taken away by eating a little sugar after it, some parsley, or a pinch of dry tea. A hot bath taken the last thing before retiring, will also be found beneficial.

* * *

Do not take too thick a rind off in paring potatoes. The best part of the potato is near the skin. On the other hand, turnips should have a thick rind pared off. Turnip has an outer part that destroys the flavor of the whole if not removed.

* * *

To whitten a doorstep, mix a little quicklime with half a pint of skim milk. Having first washed the doorstep, paint it over with this mixture, and the rain will not wash it off.

* * *

To make a tough steak tender rub the meat on both sides with a mixture of equal parts of vinegar and olive oil, and leave it to stand for an hour or longer before cooking.

* * *

Fill lamps on blotting paper and whatever oil overflows will be absorbed, thus saving the table. Get heavy blotting paper and keep a sheet beside the oil-can.

* * *

In baking cakes, a piece of greased paper should be laid over the top of each cake to prevent it from "catching" in the event of the oven heat being too fierce.

* * *

If a handful of common salt be added on the washing day to the rinsing water, it will keep clothes from freezing until quite dry.

* * *

Cod liver oil, or cream for those with whom the former does not agree, should be taken regularly during the Winter months. Heat-forming foods should be taken, plenty of sugar, butter and potatoes, but not much meat.

* * *

When making brown bread add in a tablespoonful of warm molasses after the yeast has risen. This will keep it moist for several days.

"Isn't It Odd?"

Or the Way It Most Always Happens When You Wear That Old Gown

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

Isn't it odd that when you are perfectly groomed you never see a soul you know except a little bird

And when you look your worst you see all your beaux, past and future and everybody else you know!

ISN'T it odd that when you are all fussed up, on one of your "pretty days," when you have your golden hair in curl, and you've slept the night before from ten till seven (a regular beauty sleep); when your step is the lightest and your little heart is complacent under the velvet of a new gown; when your feet and your gloves are perfect and you've got the car waiting just around the corner; when you feel like Helen of Troy from the last silken hair on your head to the glitter of the buckle above your toe—isn't it odd that you never meet a soul you know?

That when you have on last Winter's top coat and the slouch hat with the battered feather on it; your nose is shiny and you have no powder puff along; your hair is just washed and the damp air has whipped the curl out of it and strung it across your face and both your hands are too full to push it away; when you have on your ancient-est and ugliest frock and you wouldn't swear that your Dutch collar is absolutely fresh; when you've lost one glove and can't get to the other and your shoes are scuffed; when your arms are full of enormous bundles; when you are carrying a caramel cake from your mother to her dearest friend; when it's going to rain and you (your own little "'ella" in hiding) had to take your grandfather's aged green one; when the car is "out of business" and so you can't have it to hide your shame in—isn't it odd that you meet everybody you know, and they SEE you, too, all the girls whose opinions you care about, and all the beaux you ever had or hope to have—Isn't it odd?

Dorothy Dix Says:

Vanity Makes More Matches Than Cupid, and the Use of Soft Soap Smooths the Way of Many Feet to the Altar, and the Lack of It Makes a Toboggan Slide to Reno

"VANITY of vanities," saysth the preacher, "all is vanity"—and even matrimony, according to a correspondent of this paper who thinks that he has solved the problem of why people marry.

"Are not most marriages the result of vanity, and not of love?" he asked. "A man marries a woman because it pleases his vanity to win her away from other men, and thus triumph over his rivals. A woman marries a man because it gratifies her vanity to be preferred above other women, and because she is enraptured with his praises and flatteries of her."

Of course nobody knows why anybody marries anybody else. Still less do they know why they married the particular individual that they did. That is the great mystery of the universe, the sex call that is the profoundest secret of nature.

But outside of this without doubt my correspondent is right, and vanity has to do with the making of more matches than ever Cupid has. It is vanity that makes marriages, and it is vanity that breaks them when the people who have won each other by playing upon their self-esteem grow careless or tired of ministering to egotism. The use of soft soap smooths the way of many feet to the altar, and the lack of it makes a toboggan slide to Reno.

Think many a man marries because it tickles his self-esteem to carry off some particular maiden whom other men are pursuing, goes without saying. Often there is no real affinity between him and her, and he would never have been attracted to her if some other man's attentions to her had not piqued his vanity, and inspired him to show that he was the better man.

In a Flock or Not at All

It is a property of the beautiful that no girl ever has just one beau. She has many or none, for men are like sheep in this respect. They all want to go where other men go. Every man is eager to dance with the girl over whose ball program other men are fighting, but no man save a martyr, will dance with the lone maiden who papers the wall. Nothing inspires a man with such a mad desire to take a girl out to the theatre as for her to refuse to go two or three times because she has previous engagements.

The woman who has a dozen proposals will have a dozen more, whereas the woman who wants to marry will never have any at all. You could make any girl a belle by employing three good looking young men to hang about her for six months. They would toll in all the other eligible men in the community, and she could have her pick of them because it would please their vanity to marry a woman whom other men admire and desire, and also it would stimulate their sense of rivalry to know other men to be in pursuit of her.

Undoubtedly the reason why many men grow tired of their wives is because this dilly to their vanity is removed with marriage.

They have captured the prize, and since, after marriage, nobody else appears to want to dispute their ownership in it, it becomes cheap and worthless in their eyes.

Many a neglected wife would find her husband turned into a lover again if she were about to be snatched away from him. It is the knowledge that she is his for keeps that he can't lose her that makes him indifferent to her.

Women marry just as much for vanity as men do. Most girls do accept the first man that proposes to them, and every girl is tempted to, no matter how unsuitable he is, or how homely, or dull or uncouth he may be, or how little she may ever have thought of him before, just because such a gorgeous, surging wave of gratified vanity goes over her at the realization that she has been able to inspire sentiment in a man's heart. It is her initial experience of the success of being an attractive woman.

And she never gets over this feeling. Her vanity is always a harp with a thousand strings upon which a man can play as long as she lives. It is this that makes her so fond of flattery and criminal things, such as a rich old woman marrying a boy young enough to be her son, or a married woman wrecking her life and her family by carrying on a flirtation with some man she really cares nothing about.

No Lover Dares Tell Truth

Man's strongest appeal in courtship is likewise made not to a woman's heart but to her bump of self-esteem. A man wins a girl by telling her that she is the most beautiful creature on earth, that she is an angel, that she is a combination of every grace and virtue.

If a lover should dare to tell the truth, and say to his sweetheart, "Sally Ann, you are as homely as a mud fence, your nose is too short and your mouth too wide, and your eyes too small, and your figure stumpy and fat, and you will never set the river afire with your wit, but even so, I love you and I want you to marry me," why Sally Ann would shout a "NO" at him that would sound as if it came out of a megaphone. And she wouldn't marry him if he was the finest chap in the land. Not she. She would wait until some nice plausible liar with a slick tongue in his head came down the pike.

It is one of the tragedies of marriage that both men and women marry to get their vanity tickled, and that matrimony so often stops the hand that spreads the salve and pulls the punkah. The man has married believing that he was getting a queen that men would forever fight over and, behold, when he has gotten her he finds he is perfectly welcome to her. Also, he thought that he had found the one intelligent creature in the world who appreciated how big, and strong, and wonderful, and superior to all other men he was, and he ascertains that he has gotten a wife who has no hesitation in reminding him of his weaknesses and calling attention to his faults.

The woman has married believing that she will spend the balance of her life in listening to a paean of praises of her own charms, and after the wedding day her husband doesn't even notice how she looks, nor what she has on, nor speak of her housekeeping except when the bread is burned.

Hence the failure of matrimony and the prevalence of divorce.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

BOBBIE, sed Pa, did you ever go fishing thru the ice?

No, I cud Pa, if I ever went thru the ice I wuddent feel like fishing.

You dosnt have to git fresh, sed Pa, I meen cutting a hole thru the ice & then fishing. I am going this morning with Mister Mis-Gire, the grate German angler, & if you want to go along I am sure he will be glad to have you. He sed this morning that if I wanted to bring you along you mite cum in handy for bait.

I cud have told Pa that there wud be enuff other handy bait along, but I dident want to be rude to my father, so all I sed was that I wud go.

The place that we went was a little place nained Centerville & there was a big pickerel pond there.

You will enjoy this outing, sed Mister Mis-Gire to Pa, beekaus you will catch a lot of the finest members of the finny tribe that you ever laid yure eyes on.

I dosnt care for many fish, sed Pa, but so I have enuff to sezed to Wex Jones & Bob Kiley & a few of my frends, but what talks me, sed Pa, is the excitement of the trip, the thrill that cums to a real angler when he feels that he has a fish seekurely hooked. It is the sam kind of a thrill, I imagine, sed Pa, that Cleo-petty must have felt, wen she flirted with Mark Antony & found out that he had a notion to give up his empire for her.

I dosnt care much for the thrills, sed Mister Mis-Gire, wen I go fishing I go to git the fish, the same as Joe Gans used to fite a pelze fite & bring hoam the bacon. Thrills is all rite for sports to rite about, but they dosnt buy the baby any shoes. These pickerel that we are going to catch will sell for enuff munny to give us a little spending munny, & then have enuff left over for our bee-loved wifes & kids.

That is purely commershul, sed Pa. What I want to do is to enter into this fishing trip with pure zest, the zest of a hunter, the fire that must have been Roosevelt's when he almost shot a lion & almost got elected. There is more in hooking & losing a fish, sed Pa, than there is in catching & selling one.

By the way, sed Pa, you never knew did you, that I was the greatest angler that ever fished thru the ice. I caught 85 German carp one time when I was fishing thru the ice in a little lake in Denmark.

I dident know there was any German carp in Denmark, sed Pa's frend. I always thought that Denmark was noted mostly for Danes & excisemen.

Well, now you know sumthing that you dident know beefore, sed Pa. You just wait till you see me out there on the ice & if you dosnt see the fun fly you will have a good rite to be surprised. Why, Pa sed, cost I cut a hole in the ice big enuff to catch a whale & I landed one with a fly rod that only weighed a pound. There was a fellow with me naimed Sweeney, sed Pa.

You can tell that story to his brother, sed Mister Mis-Gire. I am going to wait till after I git to the lak befour I see what kind of a fisherman you are.

And wen Pa got to the lak he fell thru the ice & and his frend had to pull out & talk him back hoam. Pa dident catch anything except a cold.

Up-to-Date Jokes

"Shall I have to get married when I grow up?" asked little Flossie one day of her mother.

"Just as you please, dear," answered her mother, with a smile. "Most women do, however."

"Aw, I suppose so," continued the little girl, musingly: "and I think I'd better start and look out for a husband now. They say that Aunt Jane has been at it for twenty years, and hasn't caught one yet."

* * *

"I hev come to tell yez, Mrs. Malone, that yez husband met with an accident."

"Ah, what is it now?" wailed Mrs. Malone.

"He was overcome by the heat, mum."

"Overcome by the heat, was he? Aw! how did it happen?"

"He fell into the furnace over at the foundry, mum."

* * *

"Maria," said Mr. Billiams, "what ails this meat?"

"Never mind the meat, dear," said Mrs. Billiams. "I'm more concerned to know what ails you. This is the first time for twenty-five years that you haven't been able to tell exactly what ailed the meat, and everything else on the table. Aren't you well today, John?"

Stock Prices; Financial News

STATE STREET, Jan. 6.—Midday—The Boston market opened steady, but the volumes of business was not large. There was not much movement in copper stocks. At the end of the first hour Granby was off half a point and Maylower ¼, while Calumet & Arizona and Butte & Superior had made small gains.

The London copper market was easy at the opening, with spot 2s. 6d. and futures 2s. 9d. lower.

In the New York market uncertainty as to United States Supreme Court decisions expected today had a restraining effect upon speculative commitments. The subtreasury there lost $1,102,000 to the banks on Saturday, and including Friday its loss has been $2,765,000.

Early Trading in New York.

Union Pacific, Reading and Steel and some other leading issues opened higher in New York, where the market was firm at the start. American Tobacco advanced 1½, which was the best opening gain. After fifteen minutes there was profit taking and these were fractional in a number of issues. Western Maryland, after beginning ½ above Saturday's final, lost all its rise. Reading was up ¼ at the beginning, but lost ¼.

The market here followed the lead of London at the outset, but the domestic issues did not show the strength of the international stocks. Among the advances made in the first fifteen minutes were Amalgamated ¼, California ¼, Steel ⅜, Mexican Petroleum ¼, Union Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific lost ⅛.

At the end of half an hour a dragging tendency developed, especially in the railroads, because a decision in the Minnesota rate case is expected in the United States Supreme Court today. This is one of the most important railroad decisions in a long time, as it vitally affects the right of States to make rates through the power of their railroad commissions.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were above New York parity.

Boston Not Represented.

Boston is not represented, with an organization committee in the formation of the International Association of Brokers which will be launched at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York on February 20. The organization will include stock, grain, cotton and other brokers. The initiative towards its formation was taken by Norbert B. Prendergast and he said:

"The association has been formed principally for two reasons. First, to protect the interests of those honorable brokerage houses who call themselves members of the exchange and who respect the spirit of the unwritten law, and secondly, the protection of the brokers themselves.

"We started it in the West, for we saw at that time that the Eastern people either could not or would not realize that they were living in a fool's paradise.

"Fully fourteen of every ten annually by investors throughout this country runs into hundreds of millions of dollars. Realizing this the government at Washington undertakes some gigantic swindle, and Wall Street is the goat. Who is to blame for the press of the country to let the thieves loose? Stock and Bond Exchanges are said $50,000,000 annually to maintain a salon that any other citizen who contravenes the public that all stock brokers need be connected with Wall Street in some way or another.

"It always seems an extraordinary thing to me that no one has ever come forward and defended a profession which has just as much right to exist as the legal profession, and I do not consider it unethical, as a term which is loathed and despised.

"There is no question in my mind that our business would be conducted along different lines."

Events of Interest.

Here are some of the events which Wall Street is awaiting with interest:

Today—Committee hearing on currency reform. Resumption of Money Trust inquiry. Supreme Court decisions. First tariff hearing—chemical schedule.

January 8—December statement of Copper Producers' Association.

January 9—Government cotton ginning report.

January 10—Unfilled order report of U. S. Steel. Tariff hearing—Metals, and manufactures of. Great Northern ex. 1% per cent. dividend.

January 17—Tariff hearing—Tobacco, pulp and paper.

January 20—Tariff hearing—Agricultural products and provisions.

January 22—Tariff hearing—Cotton manufactures.

January 27—Tariff hearing—Wool, and manufactures of.

Financial News in Brief.

First National Bank interests, including J. Pierpont Morgan and George F. Baker, have sold their stock control of the Chase National Bank of New York to President Albert H. Wiggin of the latter. This was the result of the Pujo Money Trust investigation. The control of these New York banks by the same interests attracted the attention of the probers. It was said in New York today: "The transfer marks what is believed to be the beginning of the end of the control of one or more banks in the United States by another bank through the subterfuge of a trust company or a holding company."

Spelter production in 1912 totalled 538,630 tons, and consumption exceeded that figure, being 339,793. Stocks on hand January 1 amounted to only 2,208 tons. The latter figure represents only four days' supply. The statistics were compiled by Thompson, Towle & Co.

In speaking of the slump in American Beet Sugar, the New York American says: "The abnormal earnings of 1911, on which the high record price of Beet Sugar was founded, were the result of a failure of the best sugar crops in Germany and other foreign countries, combined with a record crop both for size and quality in the United States."

The United States last year produced 220,260,000 forty-two-gallon barrels of petroleum, which were valued at $150,000,000. This was $10,000,000 more than the value of the 1911 production, although the latter was 250,000 barrels greater. The price of oil went up despite of "competition" between Standard Oil subsidiaries. This country furnishes the world with about two-thirds of its supply.

J. Pierpont Morgan is booked to sail for the Mediterranean tomorrow.

Increased railroad revenues for November are reported as follows: $20,200, and Norfolk & Western $291,905. For five months the Rutland reports an increase of $161,295, and the Norfolk & Western $1,844,099.

HURLEY AGAIN MAYOR; PLANS BIG SHAKE-UP

Several Massachusetts cities today inaugurated their mayors and new city government, and Mayor John F. Hurley's 46th inauguration as Mayor of Salem led them all in point of popular interest. True to his tradition of keeping something going, Mayor Hurley came out for some startling reforms.

Mayor Hurley declared that he proposed to get rid of all of the "farce comedy" feature of the police department.

There is to be a big shake-up in this department and the fire department, is to be overhauled. Mayor Hurley is strong for the formation of an artillery company. As it is now, there is nothing here to produce a rifling salute on State occasions as it were, and the Mayor believes in reverberating salutes.

Besides going over to the police department and readjusting the situation, the Mayor favors a new automobile ambulance and a new automobile police patrol. He favors a paid instructor in athletics at the Salem High School and a class in domestic science for the girls.

Other Cities Inaugurate.

Somerville, Springfield, Lynn and Brockton held inaugurations in the forenoon. Quincy's new officials took office at noon and Woburn's in the afternoon. Everett and Beverly will install their officials this evening.

At 10 a. m. Mayor-elect George H. Newhall of Lynn took the oath of office in the old Council Chamber before an audience of about 2,000. The Rev. J. Frankin Knotts was chaplain.

Mayor Newhall was presented by his predecessor in office William P. Connery and the oath of office was administered by Judge Henry T. Lummus.

The Mayor spoke briefly, recommending that a new fire house be built for East Lynn, that all the heads of the city departments and their employes keep out of politics and that the collection of ashes, paper and waste be transferred from the health to the street department.

In the evening a reception will be tendered. The City Hall will be illuminated with 500 red, white and blue incandescent lights.

The Somerville city government was inaugurated in the Y. M. C. A. Building. In the United inaugural address Mayor Charles A. Burns urged development of the Mystic River and general industrial development. He said:

"We need more business enterprises. Our freight terminal facilities should be increased. If the Mystic River could be developed and widened it would be of great advantage, as we would not have to depend entirely upon the railroads for transportation of freight. If necessary I will recommend an appropriation for the purpose of promoting industrial development."

The Rev. Dr. William Rice Newhall, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, offered prayer, and Judge L. Roger Wentworth, administered the oath of office to the Mayor and Aldermen-elect.

Democrats in Brockton.

When Mayor-elect Charles M. Hickey was inducted into office in Brockton, for the first time in the history of the city the municipality a Democratic city government assumed control. Chief interest is centered in the distribution of the plums.

A superintendent of public buildings at $1,500 will be exerted, as will a city solicitor at $1,100; city messenger, $800; city physician, $1,000; assessors, $1,500 and other minor offices. Mayor-elect Hickey will be called upon to appoint a city marshal at $1,800; executive officer of the Board of Health, $1,200, and three members of the new highway commission.

When Harry C. Foster takes office in Rochester today, an orchestra he has hired out of his own pocket will play.

Mayor James Chambers of Everett will be inaugurated for the second time tonight. He will call for immediate action on the new compulsory school accommodations in several parts of the city. He will also outline a vigorous policy to buy this year all the playground locations necessary to meet the demands of the future.

A contest is anticipated for the presidency of the Board of Aldermen and the presidency of the Council.

Give Quincy Mayor Flag.

After Mayor Stone of Quincy took office for the second time this noon, members of Paul J. Revere Woman's Relief Corps presented him a silk national flag, which is intended to be the future of the Mayor's office. The presentation was made by Mrs. Eliza A. Pennebaker, patriotic instructor of the corps. The inauguration banquet of the City Council of 1912-1913 will be held at the Parker House, Boston, this evening.

At Beverly's first inaugural ball at City Hall tonight the grand march will be led by Mayor-elect Herman A. MacDonald and his mother.

Denison Takes Office.

In Springfield, John Avery Denison was sworn in as Mayor at 10 o'clock by Judge H. W. Bosworth. Henry Lasker was elected president of the Board of Aldermen and Edward T. Broadhurst was chosen president of the Common Council.

The Woburn city government of 1913 was inaugurated this afternoon. In Lyceum Hall there was a large gathering heard Mayor William H. Hinchey deliver his inaugural address, Rev. Francis G. Russell offered prayer.

Mayor Hinchey in his inaugural address said that present conditions necessitate the most rigid economy. This evening there is to be a grand inaugural concert and ball.

BIRDS ARRIVE FOR BIG POULTRY SHOW

Thousands of blooded birds are arriving today for the big poultry show that begins in Mechanics Building tomorrow morning.

Exhibits from places as distant as California and London are among them. Every inch of available space in the big halls is in use, cages occupying almost the entire floor. Here and there are artificial pools for the web-footed tribe. The world's most famous turkey, Dan Amos, will be on hand.

EXPLOSION HURLS THREE OUT AT $12,000 BROOKLINE FIRE

Three men were cut by flying glass. Some mail was damaged and a horse was hurt. Three alarms were sounded. The loss was about $12,000.

The Chinamen who were trying to rescue their effects from their laundry at No. 1348 Beacon street, were carried through a large plate glass window. They were Tow Chung You, thirty-eight, Tow Sam, twenty-seven, and Tow Sing, thirty-two, brothers.

A horse attached to combination A, was thrown by the explosion.

John H. Lacy, Thomas Moran, George Rick of 123 Aspinwall avenue, John Moran, and James Kelly forced their way through the flames in the store of David J. Quinn and recovered much of his property, including books and money.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

There has been considerable discussion in the past few months as to what is the correct solution of the "used car problem" and the Buick Boston Company believes that they have answered the question in a most satisfactory manner. Realizing that trading in used cars was a necessary evil to the motor car industry, this progressive company has had built on Newbury street, Boston, a handsome showroom, a new store in which the used car department will be located. This store is now complete and several of the best of the Buick Boston Company's used car bargains will be on exhibition after tomorrow.

Every used car taken in by the Buick people receives careful painting and tuning up as may be necessary to put it in good running condition.

Salesmen employed by the Thomas B. Jeffery Company in marketing the new Cross Country car have come over with opportunity to become stockholders in three of the leading railroads of the country since announcement was made of a sales campaign which these stocks are given as the chief prizes.

The contest began November 15 and will continue to March 15, and is called an "immediate delivery contest," and salesmen turning in orders for cars for immediate delivery are credited with points in accordance with the date of delivery for which the order calls.

The first prize is a share of Pennsylvania, the second a share of Atchison, and the third a share of Chesapeake & Ohio.

Although the Premier Little Six has been particularly popular among motorists since its first appearance, Manager R. I. Eads of the Premier Motor Car Company of New England finds the demand for the latter, models of the extensive line as strong as ever. Orders are coming in from many friends and Mr. Eads reports a brisk business in those carried for Winter use.

"The Little Six is a new model, differing only in its motor size and arrangement and in chassis dimensions. The motor has cylinders four inches in diameter by five inches stroke, and practically the same construction is used as in the 'Big Six,' except that with a smaller bore of cylinder the three cylinders are combined in a unit, so that the cylinders are cast in triplets. This arrangement of placing the three cylinders close together, making a minimum distance between end bearings and centre bearings.

CLARA BUTT IS IN FINE VOICE AT SYMPHONY

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Much was expected of Miss Clara Butt, the English contralto, when she appeared at Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon, but not nearly so much as was granted a rather flabbergasted audience.

For when the door leading to the platform opened out walked a giantess of a woman who dwarfed her accompanist, the piano, and even made the great organ look ordinary.

Six feet two is said to be Miss Butt's height, and one can well believe it; but so perfectly proportioned is she and so attractive a well that only by comparing her with other objects such the door, can one realize how unusual she is.

Her voice is as far extraordinary as her physique, for it is of tremendous magnitude. Her forte would outdo many lyric sopranos, and one of her most effective songs was colorature.

The program ranged from German classics to English ballads and was tremendously enjoyable. Kennerly Rumford, the English baritone, who furnished half the concert, proved very acceptable, but he was not in phenomenon like Miss Butt.

At the Opera House Edmond Clement was the chief soloist and Andre Caplet led his orchestra through a program of unusual French music.

TETRAZZINI TONIGHT IN HUB FAREWELL

With tonight's appearance Mme. Tetrazzini will be heard in opera in Boston for the last time this season. For her final appearance, Mr. Russell has chosen "La Traviata." It will be sung with Giovanni Zenatello in the role of Alfredo. Mr. Polese will sing Germont, Sr.

Canadians to Hear Edvina.

The first presentation this season of the Debussey opera, "Pelleas and Mellesande," at the Boston Opera House, Wednesday evening, has aroused the interest of international importance since, for the first time in the history of the Boston Opera House, there will be presented a distinguished party of citizens of Canada.

The Canadians will number fully a score, chief among whom will be Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. The visit was in honor of Mme. Louise Edvina, who is to sing the principal role of Melisande.

Another Hide Nailed to the Old Barn Door—

Another Pestiferous Animal—Bailey by Name—Dead Politically, Skinned and Nailed. He Is One of an Interesting Collection. Each Paid His Little Tribute as He Gave Up the Ghost.

Copyright, 1913, by American Journal-Examiner

You have seen the barn door of the careful farmer. It is decorated with the hides and feathers of the enemies that attack his honest chickens and ducks.

On that old barn door the farmer nails up the feathers of the hoot-owl, the crow and the hawk. Or he ties a string around the bird's neck and hangs him up as a warning.

And on that old barn door the farmer nails tight and fast the hides of the animals that rob the chicken coop; they are the thieves, grafters, corruptionists of the farm—the weasels, skunks, ferrets, polecats and foxes.

Each hide nailed up is a warning. And in the sunshine in front of that old barn door the honest chicken may scratch with her brood, knowing that the warnings will keep other evildoers away.

We, dear friends, also possess our old barn door. On this page you can see its picture. And we decorate it simply and unostentatiously in imitation of the honest American farmer.

Ours is not an agricultural barn. It contains news and views, instead of hay, oats and corn.

But there is only one proper way to decorate A BARN DOOR. And we decorate ours in the proper way, with the hides and the feathers of the enemies of good and honest people.

We have just nailed up a new hide on the barn door, that of Bailey of Texas.

If there were a dictionary of political animals you would find this gentleman under the letter "S" described (we quote the Standard Dictionary) as follows: "An American mephitine musteloid carnivore of stout form, with a bushy tail."

The farmer will tell you, and we can tell you, that the process of killing off creatures of this kind is not pleasant.

Only a strong sense of duty enables the farmer to go through with the killing and the skinning of one of these quaint animals.

And only a strong sense of duty makes it possible for us to decorate our old barn door as we do.

The last moments of these animals are not pleasant for anybody concerned in the killing. Because your "mephitis mephitica," to use the Latin name, never can appreciate the fact that to kill him, skin him, and nail his hide up as a warning, is a useful, virtuous act.

Let us come back to Mr. Bailey, formerly one of the most active "Musteloid Carnivores" of American politics.

He died politically in the Senate on January 2d. His farewell squeak was heard there; now you can see his hide nailed to our barn door with some others.

The New York Times describing the death agonies of this interesting political animal, says: "Where he (Bailey) had been expected to denounce his enemies, personal and political, with his well known scathing tongue, he confined his criticism almost exclusively to William Randolph Hearst." Of course he did. The dullest musteloid knows his destroyer.

Please do not think, because we discuss this matter in a light tone, that we enjoy the painful duty of destroying even the meanest thing that the Lord has made.

The funny little screech owl—Archbold—still alive, so unhappy, sits perched and tied, waiting for the fateful blow that will send him to join poor dismal crow Sibley. But we hardly have the heart to do what we probably ought to do.

Even such a creature as Bailey, a menace to all honest fowl in the political barnyard, arouses in us as he dies, although he may not believe it, a sense of regret and sadness.

We realize what he MIGHT have done, had his nature made him serve the people as faithfully as he served Archbold, and others with money.

We know that he is not so much to blame as the system of organized financial corruption.

He was not the principal, but the tool used by bigger and abler men whose influence he could not resist. It was not with pleasure, but with sadness, that we watched this man drift from a position of great opportunity, one of the youngest and ablest men in the United States Senate, into his present fallen state, overwhelmed with the contempt of his fellow citizens, who have repudiated him.

It is only natural that in his last agony, career gone, reputation gone, future gone, he should attack the man that exposed him and terminated his career.

He is not alone in that.

Senator Foraker, once in the United States Senate (see his skin on our barn door), talked just as unpleasantly.

And Lorimer, who bought his seat in the Senate—and was not allowed to keep it—(see his skin on the barn door) also did as much as a man of his feeble ability could do to make himself disagreeable in his dying Senatorial moment.

We expect in the future to see more than one of these sad-eyed musteloid carnivores of the United States Senate and other political bodies get up, a tear in each eye, and die unpleasantly—with especial unpleasant references to these newspapers and their management.

But, like the farmer whose old barn door with its decorations encourages the honest hen or duck, we are reconciled to the hatred of the mephitic tribe, since we must have it in order to do our duty by honest fowl.

Rest, peacefully and gently, poor, mephitic Bailey.

One thought should comfort you. You will do no more harm. And now that you can't do HIM any more good, you probably won't hear any more from little hoot-owl Archbold.

And there won't be any more letters between you two to print. Not even a tiny little certificate of deposit.

Rest in peace, poor little musteloid. You were not able to be a good man, but for some time to come what is left of you will be a useful warning.

Our Old Barn Door

The interesting hides of quaint and curious animals decorate it. We expect to increase the decoration as years go by. (SEE EDITORIAL)

Value of Gray Days—Melancholy Moods Should Be Kept as Luxuries, and Must Not Become a Habit, for It Is Never Well to Rest Too Long in the Regrets of the Past.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

An occasional gray mood comes to the sunniest of natures; just as a gray day comes even in the tropics; and if we use this gray day wisely, we will be all the better for it.

When the bright sun of tropic lands is veiled by clouds, one can see farther; and the landscape is more clearly discerned; because there is not the blinding dazzle of the sunlight.

So when our hearts are clouded with a passing mist of trouble or worry, we sometimes see life more clearly; and look backward, and about, and beyond with a larger vision.

I think it is a good thing now and then to grow utterly sick of ourselves, and to sit down and pull our minds and hearts and motives and actions and ambitions to pieces and dust them out as a watchmaker cleans a watch and then put them together again with care and resolve to begin all over and do better—AND THEN TO DO IT.

It is never well to rest too long in regrets of the past; for that is over and gone; and cannot be remedied.

But it is well to remember the past enough to make it act as a guide and warning for the future.

But moods of retrospection and regret and melancholy should be kept as luxuries; and must never become a habit.

Indulged in rarely, they may serve as a tonic; but regularly followed they become a poison.

When you are walking and carying heavy burdens, and you grow utterly weary and fatigued, it is not well to keep staggering on. It is better to sit down and rest a bit, even if you feel as you pause that you can never go on again. After a little while you will feel more courage and you will go on. But do not sit too long.

Are you weary with trying to do your best, and have you about decided that you will give up the battle?

Do you feel that nothing matters very much—that whether you succeed or fail is of small account to the world?

Do you begin to think you are a very small unit in the universe, and that the best thing for you to do is just to take life as it comes, and to make no effort to attain any special goal, either intellectual, morally or financially? Are you sick of the eternal effort to be and do, and are you contemplating a renunciation of all ambition?

Well, stop and think a bit. Suppose Columbus had yielded to such a mood before he discovered America?

World Would Be Loser Had Noted Men Brooded Over the Past

What if George Washington had made such a decision in his early youth, or Benjamin Franklin, or Shakespeare, or Milton?

What if Morse or Edison had given up the struggle to accomplish anything? And Cyrus Field had said he was weary of trying to gain his goal and so had let the ocean cable die a dream of imagination?

What losers we would all be by it!

It is not merely you, yourself, who is to be benefited or harmed by your success or failure in life. You are to leave an influence on all who know you, no matter how humble your position may be.

Throw a pebble into the sea—and watch the disturbance of the waters; larger and larger grow the circles, and as they fade away invisible to the eye they are felt by the waves beyond our sight.

It is so with each one of us. You are affecting every life you encounter on life's journey to some degree. You will affect lives of beings yet unborn—in what way and through what sources it is impossible to tell; but, nevertheless, an invisible influence is at work connecting you with other destinies as by an unseen cord.

Think of this when you are discouraged and disheartened and push ahead.

When Discouraged, Remember Every Cloud Has a Silver Lining

If all the end of this continuous striving
Were simply to attain,
How poor would seem the planning and contriving,
The endless urging and the hurried driving
Of body, heart and brain!

But ever in the wake of true achieving
There shines this glowing trail—
Some other soul will be spurred on, conceiving
New strength and hope, in its own power believing,
Because thou didst not fail.

Not thine alone the glory—nor the sorrow
If thou dost miss the goal;
Undreamed of lives in many a far tomorrow
From thee their weakness or their force shall borrow—
On, on, ambitious soul!

TWO

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

One is a woman that wandered
Through fields of honey and sin
And came to the house of care and carouse
Where they lock the mistaken in.
The other is watching the outcast
And fearing the System's ban.
The one is the fallen woman—
The other the rising man."

The rising man is a bluecoat,
And the whole of his manhood shrinks
When taking the toll from a fallen soul,
But he rises, or else he sinks.
So they meet and they pity each other,
While they talk of Life's sorry plan.
The one is the fallen woman—
The other the rising man.
